House deals defeat to Ford on oil plan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House Wednesday night rejected President Ford's plan to lift price controls on U.S. oil gradually over the next three years, setting the stage for possible sudden decontrol and sharp consumer price increases Sept. 1.

House adoption 228-189 of a resolution disapproving Ford's plan was a challenge to Ford to agree to extend current controls, or to let them lapse Aug. 31 and take some of the blame for the price increases that would result.

"Let's leave the price controls where they are," Rep. Brock Adams, D-Wash., urged the House. "Then send the President an extension (of the law under which controls are written) and if he vetoes an extension, any decontrol is on the President's head."

House Republican Conference Chairman John B. Anderson of Illinois said Ford will surely not go along with an extension, but he asked, "On whose head will the blame fall? On the arrogance and stubbornness and defiance of Congress in its refusal once, twice, even four times to yield to a compromise with the President."

Later federal energy administrator Frank Zarb issued a statement indicating Ford has already made up his mind to let controls lapse.

"This nation cannot afford further delay in establishing a firm energy policy," Zarb said. "At the President's direction, the Federal Energy Administration is making necessary preparations for an orderly transition upon expiration of the Emergency Petroleum Allocation Act on Aug. 31."

Hours before the House vote, the Senate had blocked 50-44 a similar resolution of disapproval, leaving the final showdown to the House.

Ford offered his gradual decontrol plan as the only compromise he could make, and administration officials have hinted strongly that its rejection would bring a veto that would mean full decontrol at the end of next month.

According to economists in and out of the administration, full decontrol would quickly more than double the price of some 60 per cent of the nation's oil supply and result in sharply higher consumer prices for everything from gasoline to electricity.

Before the disapproval vote, the House signaled its mood by rejecting even a modification of the Ford plan submitted as an amendment to a pending energy conservation bill.

Instead, it wrote into that bill an amendment by Rep. Harley O. Staggers, D-W.Va., that would force uncontrolled oil prices down to $7.50 a barrel (prices now are around $13 a barrel), keep the $5.25 ceiling on "old oil" — essentially oil in production before 1973 — and allow a $10 price for some hard-to-produce oil. That bill remained before the House for further amendment and final consideration.

Congress gives itself pay raise

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House Wednesday voted 214 to 213 for a cost of living pay increase that could reach 8.6 per cent for members of Congress and others like Vice President Nelson Rockefeller and former President Richard Nixon.

The House acted less than 24 hours after the Senate, on a 58-29 vote late Tuesday, approved the pay increase plan endorsed by President Ford as a means of keeping key top-scale federal employees from leaving government for more lucrative private jobs.

Called a necessity because of the increased cost of living since the last congressional pay raise of 41 per cent on March 1, 1969, the size of the pay boost will actually be determined by the gap between private pay and that for comparable jobs in the federal government.

That gap, as reported to Ford last week under the 1970 comparability act, is 8.66 per cent. Ford has until Sept. 1 to accept that figure, after which it would automatically become effective Oct. 1. Or he can lower it, which some sources say he will do, recommending a 5 per cent pay increase.

If that rate prevailed, Rockefeller could expect his $62,500 a year pay to increase by about $5,400. Since pensions for former presidents are pegged to cabinet-level pay — now $60,000 a year — Nixon could expect about a $5,200-a-year increase in his annual pension.

The increase, if set at 8.6 per cent, would cost about $50 million. It also would go to federal judges, now paid $40,000 a year, and top-scale federal employees, the so-called super-grade workers, who are now prohibited by law from getting more than $36,000.

The absence of pay increases for those categories for six years has resulted, backers of the plan said, in judges resigning their life-time appointments and key bureaucrats quitting for private jobs.

McDade against pay hike

By MARK BROWN
Outaway News Service
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Rep. Joseph M. McDade, R-10, Wednesday voted against a bill that would allow up to 8.6 per cent salary increases this October for members of Congress and other top government executives.

Rep. Fred B. Rooney, D-15 voted for the bill which passed the House 214-213. Senators Hugh Scott, R-Pa. and Richard S. Schweiker, R-Pa., supported the bill when it passed the Senate Tuesday night.

"It's just something I can't do in good conscience," McDade said. "A lot of people are suffering from unemployment and inflation. The least Congress can do is share this suffering to some extent."

But Rooney pointed out that federal judges and members of Congress have not had a pay raise since 1969, although the cost of living has risen 48 per cent.

"There is no question that the people will object to Congress giving itself a pay raise at this time, but that is the only way it can be done," Rooney stated.

"If you want to have able, competent people in government, they have to be paid comparable salaries to private industry. I think the pay raise is justified now," he said.

Under the 8.6 per cent adjustment, congressmen would receive more than $3,600 in additional cost of living pay a year. Congressmen now receive $42,500 per year.

McDade criticized the House for attaching the pay raise to an unrelated bill, rather than considering it on its own. Rooney said many of the negative votes were based on "pure politics."

Tense area cordoned off

Calm returns to Detroit

DETROIT (UPI) — Police set up barricades around a predominantly black west side Detroit neighborhood Wednesday, closing streets in the tension-packed area to all but residents and local businessmen.

The 20-square block area was cordoned off as a precautionary measure, police said, to avoid a renewal of street clashes touched off Monday night when a black teenager was shot to death by a white bar owner.

Police demanded identification of all persons attempting to enter the area.

The lower middle class neighborhood was quiet

Wednesday after a second night of sporadic rock-and-bottle attacks on police by roving groups of blacks.

Peace was restored to the area after police used tear gas to disperse the angry crowds who set fire to 13 business places and looted several markets and stores.

Police and clergymen circulated through the streets, mixing persuasion and police power in an operation called "Campaign Cool It", hoping to maintain the calm.

Police Chief Philip G. Tammann mobilized most of the city's 4,500-man force to prevent further disturbances. The first 2,000 police went on 12-hour duty at 3 a.m.

Mayor Coleman A. Young and other prominent black officials renewed appeals for an end to tensions sparked late Monday when a white tavern owner fatally shot a black teenager in a tavern parking lot.

At least 10 persons were injured late Monday and early Tuesday.

Channel swimmer gives up

FOLKESTONE, England (UPI) — Jack Robertson, paralyzed from the waist down, swam for 18 hours in the English channel Wednesday but failed to make it to France.

Don Philabaum, manager for the Ohio-born schoolteacher, gave up at 11:30 p.m. (6:30 p.m. EDT) a half-mile from the French coast. He said Robertson was beset by a late start, foggy conditions and adverse tides.

"Jack swam like a champion," Philabaum said, "but he just couldn't make it." They returned to the English coast shortly before 2 a.m. today to a welcome from Robertson's parents.

"He is very tired and we'll have to sleep on it before deciding if we're going to make another attempt," Philabaum said.

Earlier the Dover Coast Guard, beginning to get worried with no news of the American's boat, alerted shipping to watch for him.

Ford, Brezhnev hold private summit session

HELSINKI (UPI) — President Ford and Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev, in a "very constructive" private summit Wednesday, opened the way for the two to meet in Washington in October and complete a treaty limiting strategic nuclear weapons.

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger said if the diplomatic momentum continues, "chances are good" for the pact.

The Ford-Brezhnev session went so well that the two leaders were able to push ahead into preliminary discussions of U.S. efforts to mediate an Arab-Israeli interim agreement — although that topic had not been on the agenda until their scheduled second meeting Saturday.

Kissinger told a news conference "progress has been made" on SALT II, the nuclear arms limitation pact on which Ford and Brezhnev agreed in principle at their Vladivostok meeting in November, 1974.

"If that progress continues we think chances are good that an agreement can be made," he said.

The two leaders spent so long at their meeting that the ceremonial opening of the 35-nation European security summit here had to be delayed 10 minutes for Ford's arrival.

"I felt the high-level discussions, the discussions concerning strategic arms limitations, the total atmosphere, was very constructive," Ford told reporters as Brezhnev stood by his side at the entrance to the U.S. embassy residence.

"It was businesslike, very friendly and I am sure that when we meet again on Saturday further progress will materialize," the President said. He described the discussions as "very constructive, very friendly, very businesslike."

Kissinger said the talks proceeded "on the assumption" that the Brezhnev trip to Washington in October was on track.

Under the Vladivostok agreement, the Soviet Union and the United States would work toward a 10-year pact limiting each side to 2,400 offensive nuclear weapons, including 1,320 with multiple warheads. Acceptable verification procedures and other disagreements have slowed progress.

Following his Saturday meeting with Brezhnev, Ford will leave for Romania and Yugoslavia before heading home Tuesday.

The President began the day Wednesday at a one-hour working breakfast with British Prime Minister Harold Wilson.

British warn Soviets

Hopes high for summit

HELSINKI (UPI) — The leaders of Europe, the United States and Canada opened the largest summit conference of the 20th century Wednesday with announced hopes for peace — and a stern warning from the British prime minister to the Soviet Union.

"This is a day of joy and hope for Europe," said Finland's 74-year-old host President Urho Kekkonen, opening the gathering in the heavily guarded Finlandia House.

President Ford, Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev and West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt all made glowing pronouncements with the emphasis on the word "peace."

But British Prime Minister Harold Wilson warned that none of the nations signing a security pledge for Europe would have any excuse in the future to intervene in the internal affairs of other nations. "No excuse can henceforth be found for any participating state attempting to prevent any other from exercising its sovereign rights or to intervene in internal affairs," Wilson said.

The statement appeared designed as a direct challenge to Moscow's so-called "Brezhnev Doctrine," propounded by the Soviet Communist party general secretary after the invasion of Czechoslovakia seven years ago. Brezhnev proclaimed the right of the Soviet Union to intervene in any East European country.

The conference, the biggest since the Congress of Vienna met in 1815, marks the climax of more than two years of tough negotiations. It ends Friday evening with the signing of the co-called "final act."

The 30,000-word document will carry no legal or binding force. But Wilson and other Western leaders stressed in their speeches that it will be a moral commitment by all the signing states to work together for a tension-free Europe with greater freedom of human contacts between East and West.

Ford, speaking to newsmen

after private talks with Brezhnev, said, "I believe peace in Europe will be enhanced and so will peace in the world."

A smiling Brezhnev said, "I want peace and tranquility to reign in Europe, so we do not interfere in the internal affairs of other nations."

Schmidt also talked of peace — as a condition of change.

The heads of state took advantage of the summit meeting to arrange numerous sideline chats.

Scott's daughter held on drug rap

DOYLESTOWN, Pa. (UPI) — Mrs. Marian Concannon, daughter of Senate Minority Leader Hugh Scott, R-Pa., was arrested in a drug raid Wednesday and accused of selling $100 worth of hashish to an undercover agent.

Mrs. Concannon, 41-year-old mother of eight children, was arrested at her home and later held in lieu of $1,000 bail on a charge of possession with intent to deliver and delivery of hashish.

In Washington, Scott said, "I'll stand behind my daughter. I have no further comment."

Mrs. Concannon, a slender, petite woman wearing a sweater and dungarees when arrested, covered her face with a bandana when she was led into the courthouse for arraignment. A part-time truck driver for the local newspaper, she was among 15 persons arrested in a series of raids.

Thirty arrest warrants were issued by District Justice Oliver A. Groman of Doylestown, who presided over the arraignments.

State Attorney General Robert P. Kane said the raids in Bucks and Montgomery counties in Philadelphia's suburbia were the result of six months of undercover investigation.

He said "at least five of the subjects were major sources of illegal drugs out of state as well as intrastate." He said the other out-of-state localities included Detroit and Boston.

The five mentioned by Kane were not identified, but David A. Schall, public information officer for the state Justice Department, said Mrs. Concan-non was not one of them.

He said she was arrested for selling one ounce of hashish with a street value of $100 to an undercover agent.

Richard A. Schreck, regional director of the state Bureau of Drug Control, said the raids were part of a crackdown on drug dealers.

Mrs. Concannon worked 18 hours a week as a circulation driver for the Doylestown Intelligencer. She has worked there for seven years and was described by her supervisors as a "very good, very dependable and very reliable" worker.

She was arrested at her cottage in Point Pleasant, a rural community near the Bucks County resort area.

Cuban cigars, sugar may be long way off

NEW YORK (UPI) — Cuban sugar and Havana cigars may be a long time showing up in American stores, even with the ending of economic sanctions against Cuba by the Organization of American States, experts said Wednesday.

The main reason is that the United States, which bought about one-third of its total sugar requirements from Cuba before Fidel Castro came to power, has its own economic sanctions against Cuba, voted by Congress three years before the OAS acted.

Cuba now sells nearly all this sugar in the Communist world. Russia bought 1.925 million tons of Cuban sugar last year and has bought at least 1.5 million tons annually for some years.

There is another reason why the OAS action can have little or no early effect on U.S. trade with Cuba. There still are outstanding financial disputes between Washington and Havana dating from the Eisenhower administration over the expropriation by Castro of American banks, sugar companies and other enterprises.

Government urges move to protect non-smokers

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government said Wednesday that cigarettes represent a "serious health problem" to non-smokers as well as smokers, and recommended banning cigarettes with high levels of tar and nicotine.

Casper Weinberger, outgoing secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, sent Congress a report outlining for the first time the hazards of smoking to non-smokers.

He said in a cover letter that "the recent scientific information reviewed in the report reaffirmed the previous evidence that cigarette smoking is a serious public health problem."

He recommended legislation giving the government authority to ban manufacture or sales of cigarettes "exceeding what are considered excessively hazardous levels of tar, nicotine, carbon monoxide and other ingredients shown to be injurious to health."

The 1975 report on the Health Consequences of Smoking, ninth in a series, said the effects of cigarette smoke on healthy non-smokers consist mainly of minor eye and throat irritation, Attaboy, George!

CHICAGO — "How do you figure the failure of Congress to override President Ford's vetoes?" a reporter asked AFL-CIO President George Meany Wednesday. "They didn't have enough votes," Meany replied.

Gurney jury tense

TAMPA, Fla. — Tension was evident on the faces of jurors Wednesday in the third day of deliberations in the federal bribery-conspiracy trial of former Sen. Edward J. Gurney and three associates. The six men and six women who got the case shortly before noon Monday, started Wednesday's deliberations at 9:10 a.m. When they emerged from the small jury room for the lunch break, three of the women wore dark glasses and none of the jurors smiled. The jury has not given U.S. District Judge Ben Krentzman any indication of their progress. Except for requests for a list of exhibits shortly after they started, the only other communications with the outside has concerned housekeeping matters such as food and lodging.

Big Apple heads to bankruptcy

NEW YORK — Labor leaders, bankers and city officials Wednesday haggled over a stripped and frayed budget as time ticked by on the road to bankruptcy for the world's richest city. A midnight deadline set by Mayor Abe Beame for an agreement on a wage freeze for thousands of municipal workers passed early Wednesday with no action. Exhausted officials reported "good progress" during the day but the meeting abruptly recessed at 4:45 p.m. after loud shouting was heard from the conference room. One labor leader who emerged said some "knotty problems" had not been resolved, but he said they were not major. The conference was expected to resume later in the evening.

Sub-atomic particle discovered

STANFORD, Calif. — A conference of high energy physicists was told Wednesday of the discovery of a sub-atomic particle, called "U" for unknown, that does not fit any existing theory of nature. The discovery follows that of two "psi" particles whose sudden emergence last November was described by physicists as the most startling development in the field in 25 years. In their search for the ultimate smallest particle making up matter, physicists had thought they were near the answer. They theorized a system of three fundamental "quarks," a whimsical name drawn from novelist James Joyce. But the psi particles upset the theoretical appcart. They had "charm" — special properties that could not be explained.

Nixon funds slashed

WASHINGTON — A compromise budget bill that slashes more than 25 per cent from the recommended allowance for former President Richard M. Nixon won final congressional approval Wednesday. The cut was contained in a $7.59 billion appropriation measure for various executive departments and agencies through Sept. 30, 1976. It cleared the House by a 337-79 margin and a few hours later was approved by the Senate on a voice vote. Included was $187,250 to pay Nixon's $60,000 yearly pension and to meet his staff and office expenses for the 15-month period that began July 1. President Ford, in his annual budget message, had requested $253,750 for Nixon during that period. The House lopped some $100,000 from the request but the Senate restored more than $50,000 of the cut.

Elderly lose court appeal

PHILADELPHIA — A federal appeals court Wednesday upheld the constitutionality of a state law which denies property tax refunds to about 92,500 elderly persons on public assistance who rent their quarters. The Senior Citizens Property Tax Assistance Act originally provided tax rebates up to $200 a year to about 477,500 low income elderly persons who own or rent their properties. The State Lottery Fund is the source of the rebates. The legislation was amended in December of 1973 to deny the benefits to elderly renters of properties who were on public assistance. The amendment was challenged as unconstitutional in a suit filed by the Action Alliance for Senior Citizens of Greater Philadelphia Inc. and the Philadelphia Welfare Rights Organization.

Korea applies to join U.N.

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. — South Korea has applied for full membership in the United Nations, diplomatic sources said Wednesday. The application was expected to provoke a major controversy since North Korea has insisted that only a unified Korea should enter the world body. This position has been supported by China and the Soviet Union. At present, both North and South Korea maintain observer missions at U.N. headquarters in New York. The application was personally transmitted to the United Nations by Ambassador Tong Jim Park, South Korea's permanent observer to the U.N. Park met with Georg Hennig, a top aide to U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim. Waldheim is in Europe.

Little lawyers pursue evidence tampering

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — A pathologist testified Wednesday that 62-year-old jailer Clarence Alligood apparently was involved in sexual activity moments before Joan Little stabbed him to death in her jail cell. Miss Little, a 21-year-old black woman on trial for Alligood's murder, claims Alligood was trying to rape her. Her attorneys pursued attempts to prove that evidence was tampered with in her cell. They also made futile efforts to have attorney Morris Dees returned to the defense table. They made a formal motion to get him back, but Judge Hamilton C. Hobgood issued a "finding of fact" confirming his ejection of Dees, who was charged with trying to get a witness to perjure herself Tuesday. The defense motion claimed, "The court's actions were neither proper nor fair and violated the rights of a defendant to due process." Dr. Charles F. Gilbert, who performed an autopsy on Alligood's body the day after the jailer died, said there was no semen on Alligood's leg when the body was brought to Pitt County Memorial Hospital from the Beaufort County Hospital. Earlier, Beaufort County Coroner Dr. Harry M. Carpenter, who first examined the body, testified there was seminal fluid on Alligood's thigh. "Assuming that Dr. Carpenter saw the seminal fluid, and you did not, would you say it had been wiped away?" chief defense attorney Jerry Paul asked Gilbert under cross examination. "Assuming that, it had to be wiped away, yes, sir," Gilbert replied. Gilbert said during the autopsy he found seminal fluid only in Alligood's penis but had been told by Carpenter to look for it on Alligood's thigh. "It's my opinion that he ejaculated before death," said Gilbert. Gilbert said he had performed about 2,000 autopsies and never seen evidence of ejaculation after death. "I have heard, but never read, as many as 20 per cent of the males who die have some ejaculation," he said. Paul also tried to prove the jailer's body had been moved.

CIA investigators hear about Castro poison plot

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In the most explicit description of CIA-sponsored assassination plots to date, the former top aide to billionaire Howard Hughes said Wednesday the agency ordered him to contact gambling figures in a plan to poison Cuban leader Fidel Castro in 1960. Robert Maheu outlined details of the incident for reporters after testifying before investigators of the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence.

N.H. senate election sent back to voters

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Wednesday declared its "inability" to resolve the closest Senate race in history and decided to give New Hampshire voters another chance to determine who their junior senator will be. By a 71-21 vote — the no votes all from Democrats — the Senate ended a seven-month scrutiny of the dispute between Democrat John A. Durkin and Republican Louis C. Wyman and declared the New Hampshire seat vacant effective Aug. 8. The action paves the way for a new election within 45 days.

Wyman, a former five-term congressman, will go into the runoff with a big financial edge. He has a $64,000 surplus, according to latest Federal Elections Committee figures. Durkin, a former state insurance commissioner, listed debts of $45,000. However, Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield said both men should be reimbursed for "legitimate expenses" run up during the Senate's lengthy review of the dispute. Some Democrats remained angry and decried the Republican filibuster that stalled the Senate and postponed other business. "It is extremely regrettable that this contest has been before the Senate for seven months," said Sen. Howard W. Cannon, D-Nev. "The Republicans have finally had their way. The coverup has finally

Committee chairman Frank Church, D-Idaho, said meanwhile that Richard M. Nixon has been invited to testify on CIA activities while he was President, but no details have been worked out. Maheu said he saw in a Miami hotel two poison capsules which were to have been smuggled into Havana to "eliminate" the Cuban leader. "But the plan was always subject to a 'go' signal which never came," Maheu said. He said he knew of no other plots than the one in which he was involved. Maheu, an ex-FBI agent, said he worked several years for the CIA on a retainer of $500 a month, beginning in 1954. In 1960, he said, a CIA agent named Edward O'Connell told him to contact two alleged underworld figures named Johnny Rosselli and Sam Giancana who had previous gambling interests in pre-Castro Cuba.

Rosselli already has testified before the Senate panel but Giancana was murdered in Chicago last month before he could be called as a witness. Maheu said he and the two men participated in the anti-Castro plot out of "patriotism" because he said the United States planned a bombing attack on Cuba to be followed by an invasion and Castro was wanted "out of the way." "I was approached by my (CIA) project officer, James O'Connell, some time in 1960 who asked me in connection with a planned invasion of Cuba if I would contact Rosselli," Maheu said. "I was to ask him if he would help."

Maheu said he went to Miami where he was introduced to "Sam Gold" who turned out to be Giancana.

Weapons Prices increased on flour, sugar

bill passes House

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House Wednesday approved a $31.1 billion weapons bill, $3.3 billion below Pentagon requests, but including authorization for the B1 bomber and the first nuclear strike cruiser in the U.S. Navy.

The compromise measure, hammered out by Senate-House conferees last week, was passed on a 348-60 vote and sent to the Senate for final action.

The cuts came mainly in funds the Navy wanted as an inflation hedge in its shipbuilding program, reductions in the flying command post for the President and other high officials to use in case of nuclear war, a pruning of the AWACS radar and command aircraft, plus numerous cuts in research and development programs.

The measure would authorize $887 million for the B1 bomber, mainly for research and development on the successor to the aging B52. The bill, however, specifically prohibits the Pentagon from entering into contracts to actually start B1 production.

The measure authorizes $60 million to start work on the first nuclear strike cruiser, after conferees agreed to cut from the House bill $204 million for a new nuclear frigate.

By United Press International Two of the nation's largest food processors Wednesday raised wholesale prices on flour and sugar. The higher flour prices were the first solid evidence of the impact of Russian purchases of U.S. grain.

Besides the Soviet wheat deals, a sugar expert said Russian purchases of raw sugar on international markets were responsible, in part, for the boost in sugar prices.

The increases in flour and sugar prices followed substantial hikes earlier this week in coffee prices and a prediction by Chairman Arthur F. Burns of the Federal Reserve Board of higher prices for bread as a result of the Russian wheat purchases.

In Minneapolis, General Mills, one of the nation's largest millers, raised wholesale flour prices 1.6 cents a pound effective Friday. The increase affects flour purchased on grocery shelves and not bulk flour used in the mass production of bread and other bakery products.

"It has to do with the developments in the world and domestic grain markets, especially the Soviet Union developments and the possibility of drought there and their purchase of American grain," said

Lou Gelfand, a spokesman for Pillsbury, another major miller. "Since July 3 Kansas City September wheat futures have gone from $3.10 a bushel to $4," he said. "This would justify an increase in family flour prices of $2 a hundredweight."

Hazardous pesticides banned

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Environmental Protection Agency Wednesday banned most uses of two common pesticides as imminent cancer threats, saying residues are showing up in unborn babies, mothers' milk and the body tissue of most Americans.

The pesticides, heptachlor and chlordane, are widely used in agriculture, especially for corn, and frequently around the yard for controlling such pests as the Japanese beetle.

There are safe alternatives available for all uses, the EPA said. It advised consumers worried about what to do with existing supplies to simply use them up as directed on the package, and avoid dumping them in water supplies.

Let Me Assure You
by Alan Karpe

"Burglars hate noise . . . or anything else that calls attention to them," says Detective Jon Inzalaco of the New York Police Crime Prevention Squad. That's why alarms often work most effectively by scaring away a would-be burglar before he's gotten very far. Three types of alarms are available: Self-contained alarms that protect a single door or window; motion sensors that detect intrusion; and perimeter systems that cover the whole house, including every opening. Self-contained alarms are least expensive and easiest to install. But their cost mounts if you have to buy a lot of them and YOU have to remember to set each one. Motion-sensing alarms usually don't have to be installed — they're just positioned and turned on. Costs vary, and family pets can set them off. And, warn some experts, they don't go off until the intruder is already in your home. Most expensive — but most effective — is the perimeter alarm. You can get a do-it-yourself package for $100 up; professionally installed, it could cost into the thousands. But the perimeter system can protect every opening into your home. Security experts can help you choose the burglar-alarm system that's right for your needs. When you want insurance experts, call . . .

EAST STROUDSBURG — Four area girls have entered the annual Junior Miss Pageant to be held at 8 p.m., Saturday August 16, in the East Stroudsburg High School auditorium.

The pageant is sponsored by the Pocono Mountain Jaycees. Entrants include:

Sheri Lee O'Boyle, 17, of Mount Pocono. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis O'Boyle and attends Pocono Mountain High School.

A summer lifeguard, Sheri plans to attend Utica College of Syracuse University and major in occupational therapy. She would like to work with handicapped children.

A cheerleader in school, the senior has been involved in Girl Scouts, treasurer of her class and was named to Who's Who Among American High School Students and served on Oppenheim's Teen Fashion Board.

Diane Elizabeth Fallenstein, the 17 year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Fallenstein of Canadensis, also attends Pocono Mountain High School.

Employed part-time at Merrel National Laboratory, she would like to major in art and attend Northampton County Community College.

Her high school activities include cheerleading, student council, varsity club president, pep club, sports, and treasurer of student government association. She is active in aquatics and has been named to Who's Who in American High Schools.

The third contestant is Amy Sue Tweedie, 17, of Fawn Road, East Stroudsburg. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Tweedie.

Amy would like to attend the University of Pennsylvania or Cornell University and major in veterinary science. She works part-time as a riding instructor.

An avid horsewoman, she has participated in horse shows and 4-H functions. At East Stroudsburg High School she is an honor roll student and involved in student council, 10th grade vice-president, chorus, cheerleading and participated in the junior class play.

Carol Jean Manson, 16, of Sweet Fern Road, Stroudsburg, is the fourth candidate. She is the daughter of John Manson and Josephine VanWhy.

The Stroudsburg High School senior works part-time as a waitress and would like to attend a college of fashion and design. She hopes to become a model.

Chairman of the equestrian club, she won awards in twirling and enjoys sewing, biking and hiking.

It toad us about the rain

By MAUREEN RUFÉ
Pocono Record Reporter
BRODHEADSVILLE — There's a special new weather device that is in operation on top of the Effort Mountain that can predict rain with almost 100 per cent accuracy. The best feature about the forecasting device is that the only thing needed to keep it in operation is an occasional bucket of water or two.

It was only recently that a local toad hopped up to the back yard of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Block's new home next to Mt. Effort Fabrics, spotted a cozy window well and decided to make it home.

Every night when the toad heard Block running the water into his hose to water his dogs, out hopped the unusual house guest for a nightly drenching. Obliging, Block would dump a bucket or two of water on the toad.

The one mysterious night, the toad did not come up for his shower. The Blocks theorized that it must be about to rain soon, and sure enough a downpour followed in a few hours. Now every time the toad doesn't come up for a shower, they can predict with almost 100 per cent accuracy that it means rain.

The Western Pocono Community Library got a real shot in the arm this month with that $1,000 that was finally approved for them from the Pleasant Valley School Board.

In addition, the Sciota Belles contributed $250 to the library and plan to make the facility their benefactor during upcoming fund-raising projects.

The United Methodist Church is holding its annual Bible school from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m., Aug. 4 to Aug. 8 at the church if you're interested in attending.

'Big Daddy's Pizza Parlor has finally opened for business on Rte. 209 in Kresgeville and we understand the place is a special hit with local kids and adults alike.

There are a few people who are able to go to the movies in Brodheadsville on Thursday nights at Burney's Motel and the flicks are not just run of the mill. This week, for example, Kon-Tiki is being shown. Sorry, though, folks, the flicks are only for motel guests. The motel is able to loan the films free of charge through the new West End library each week. The films are available to area motels.

Joseph's, that new hair stylist place in Brodheadsville, is open for business, in case you haven't noticed.

West End Carpet is really giving that barn across the street from the Brodheadsville Post Office a facelift. This week it is being spruced up with maroon aluminum siding and white shutters. Before the end of the summer it should be turned into storage space for the carpet business and additional office space.

According to supervisor Richard Normyle, Jackson Township has two special meetings coming up this month. On Aug. 1 the township will consider an ordinance which will require developers to post bonds for unfinished subdivision roads before their plans can be signed. According to Normyle, another special meeting will be held Aug. 12 to let residents give their input as to how federal revenue sharing funds should be spent.

The Effort United Methodist Church has made plans once again for that scrumptious chicken barbeque they hold every year, and as usual they will even deliver orders to your home if you like. The menu includes a half of a chicken, corn on the cob, baked potato, spiced cabbage, rolls and butter, homemade cake and pie and a beverage. The dinner is set for Aug. 16 from 4 p.m. to 7 p.m. The fee is $4 for adults and $2 for kids under 12. You can eat in, carry out, or have the dinner delivered. For tickets or delivery, call 992-6079 or 681-4657.

The West End carnival is on now and will run through Aug. 2, so be sure to attend. Grounds prizes will be awarded nightly and there will be entertainment, tonight (Thursday), Friday and Saturday.

The West End Recreation and Park Commission will sponsor a special summer carnival from 9:30 a.m. to 12 noon today at the West End Park. Children five to 14 are invited.

The second session of swimming lessons at the West End Park will run Aug. 4-22. Interested children four to 14 should report to the park life guard before Monday for pre-testing.

ESSC professor to direct seminar

EAST STROUDSBURG — Dr. Thomas J. Rookey, director of the Educational Development Center at East Stroudsburg State College, has been asked to direct a session at the Pennsylvania Executive Academy in August.

Dr. Rookey will deal with the topic of "Goal Setting in Relation to Curricula Decision Making." A wide range of topics solicited from districts throughout the state serve as major themes for the academies. The variety of subtopics is almost boundless and can accommodate the myriad of problems identified by the participants.

The executive team identifies a subtopic in its area of interest and defines a problem to be resolved. The academy program will provide the setting for creative problem-solving.

Activities at the academy will include large and small group discussions on current and emerging issues, brainstorming on causes of present situations and possible solutions, sharing practical "how-to-do-it" information with other school districts, working as individual school-district teams on problem-resolution strategies to be implemented within your own district, establishing, sharing and developing working relationships with other participants and acquiring a working knowledge and practical experience in planning procedures and techniques.

Consultants, Pennsylvania Department of Education staff and school-district team members will share responsibility and knowledge to help each district design alternatives and action plans for district implementation.

Church singers

EAST STROUDSBURG — A New England singing group will perform at the 8:30 and 11 a.m. Sunday worship services at the East Stroudsburg United Methodist Church.

The trio, Blessed Are, will present Christian folk as well as traditional gospel and classical Christian music.

Tocks decision? Not just yet

Sometime this morning, the governors (or their representatives) of four states and the stand-in for former U.S. Interior Secretary Stanley Hathaway will sit down in a room in Newark, N.J. and decide the fate of the Tocks Island Dam and Reservoir project.

That's what the press releases say, anyway, and it actually may happen that way. Most probably, however, position statements will be made, some discussion may take place, and the governors will return to their capitol building offices to further contemplate the controversial nature of the dam and reservoir.

They have until Aug. 28 to say aye or nay to the project. The five votes will add up to the recommendation of the Delaware River Basin Commission — they are the voting members of that body — and Congress has pretty much agreed to go along with the DRBC's advice.

There is much involved in the project, much more than simply building a dam and creating a 37-mile-long lake. Its existence will swell the population of the tourist-oriented Pennsylvania counties involved, and of the rural, almost wild northwestern New Jersey counties. The impact on New York counties involved will pretty much be restricted to eliminating effluents that could ruin Tocks Lake before it really gets started. Delaware's concern centers around the flow of fresh water into Delaware Bay, which affects shorelines and shellfish beds.

There are other problems: a permanent increase in the numbers of people in the Poconos and the New Jersey wilds that will force local governments to increase police protection, improve pretty bad local roads, and almost non-existent waste and sewerage disposal facilities.

The pluses predominantly include a greater and more stable water supply for the cities of the East, especially in New Jersey and New York City; greater recreational facilities for the teeming hordes of the megalopolis; a business boom for the immediate area, and hundreds of jobs for the eight years or so the dam and allied facilities are expected to take in construction.

Weighed in against those factors, in addition to the financial outlays for expanded services and better roads (the latter especially in New Jersey), are environmental concerns. The dam unquestionably will alter permanently the character of the upper Delaware Valley. Valuable archeological artifacts and sites will be inundated under a hundred feet of water. Historic sites will suffer the same fate. Increased tourist activity will endanger flora and fauna. And unless New York does something about the chicken manure runoff in Sullivan County, the lake will be subject to eutrophication, which is a polite way of saying being overgrown with algae blooms.

All these contrary factors make the Tocks project as controversial as any in memory. There is much to be gained, much (depending on your point of view) to be lost. And that is why we suspect the DRBC governors will not announce their decision today. They will send up trial balloons at their press conference and do a bit of lobbying and sounding out of interested parties first. And then, on Aug. 28, the word will come down.

We could be wrong. And, as tired of the delays on this project as we are, we hope so. It is time for a decision. Further delays will not serve any useful purpose. But, politics being what it is, we don't think so.

Recovery threatened

The news, so far, may augur well for economic recovery, but neither the Arab oil sheiks nor the southwestern natural gas barons have been heard from yet.

The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) has two reasons for wanting a substantial oil price increase this fall — high prices have cut consumption to the point where low sales are reducing profits; and the group is reluctant, having had a taste of international power, to relinquish any of it.

The motives of the natural gas barons aren't any more difficult to figure out. With the interstate price of natural gas regulated, it is far more profitable to sell the fuel within the state of origin, and lack of intrastate profits makes it less than encouraging to develop more sources of supply.

There's a third threat to economic recovery, too — President Ford's proposal to bring the price of "old" oil up close to the price of "new" oil, which will raise the cost of transportation and industrial operations substantially.

Without going into the merits of these actions just now, they nonetheless all add up to an ominous augury for quick and satisfactory economic recovery. Much of the problem could have been avoided had either Congress or the administration acted on the energy crisis years ago when it first surfaced.

There's little enough that can be done about that now, but there must be no further delay in coming up with a program that will encourage development of alternative energy sources, new sources of old forms, and even more conservation to ease the burden of the energy price squeeze that looms.

Will U.S. have a choice of 'no more Vietnams!'

About the last thing anyone wants to do at this stage, I suppose, is derive applicable lessons from our Vietnam experience.

Naturally enough, with the end of our Vietnam debacle rapidly approaching, spokesmen of virtually every political hue are drawing the lesson "never again." And every shade of political opinion from Cambridge, Mass., to Mississippi gives the answering echo, "Never again."

All this is perfectly understandable. Tragic enough that 50,000 lives and $150 billion have gone for nothing. Added to this, moreover, is the ignominious style of our expulsion from Indochina — our Ambassador in Phnom Penh effecting a quick helicopter getaway, reminiscent of Bonnie and Clyde, our remaining civilians in Saigon in some danger from erstwhile allies, who now feel betrayed. An incredible mess.

But — no more Vietnams? The decision will not be entirely on our own. The millennium has not arrived, and "wars of liberation" remain very much a part of the Soviet and Chinese tactical program. The likelihood exists, therefore, that we will become involved somewhere, sometime, in another Communist-sponsored insurgency. It could happen in the Philippines, say, or in some key Latin American nation like

Jeffrey Hart

Mexico which now has a 40 per cent unemployment and mushrooming population growth.

Basic lessons

In that eventuality, what have we learned from Vietnam? I offer a few of the most rudimentary lessons?

1. Television. This was the first modern war in which U.S. troops were engaged without serious accompanying censorship. Television crews and journalists of all kinds roamed virtually uninhibited through the battle area. About this, two points.

Such media coverage took place only on our side of the battle lines. The North Vietnamese, of course, gave no similar privileges. The result was that TV audiences saw bodies our soldiers had shot or bayoneted, prisoners our side had taken, ruined villages under our side's control, dissidents and political protesters against Saigon's rule, and so forth.

Everyone who is not utterly naive knows that many media people in Vietnam were ideologically hostile to the U.S. and South Vietnamese effort. But even if that had not been the case, total coverage on our side in contrast with total censorship on the other side undoubtedly worked to our serious disadvantage.

Second: battlefield TV coverage just does not make for prime-time "G" entertainment — suitable for the whole family. A combat soldier requires lengthy conditioning before he can function under battle conditions. Those scenes of shelling and napalming pumped into the living room over the TV screen, night after night, month after month, reach an audience that has had no comparable conditioning. Televised warfare does not, as the Nixonians used to say, play in Peoria.

2. Incremental Escalation Theory. The Johnson Administration reasoned that by gradually increasing our battlefield strength in Vietnam we could both demonstrate firmness of will and eventually subject the enemy to unbearable pressure. In fact, incremental escalation permitted the enemy, who was basically weaker, to anticipate and adapt to each addition of U.S. power.

Interestingly, the same Johnson Administration intervened with overwhelming strength in the Dominican Republic, and intervened successfully. In any military action, the advantage belongs to the side capable of a quantum leap in the application of force. The people's war of liberation is no exception.

Make it official

3. Declaration of War. When U.S. troops become engaged over a period of any length, a formal declaration of war is probably called for. During a revolutionary period like the present one, the conflict abroad inevitably becomes a conflict at home, those sympathizing with the enemy doing their best to undercut the war effort. It is not tolerable to have film stars, politicians, and other figures visiting the enemy camp, allowing themselves to serve the propaganda purposes of the enemy and even conducting private negotiations with the enemy.

A declaration of war against a prospective People's Revolutionary Government in, say, the Philippines would permit the treason laws to be enforced against Lord Haw Haws here at home.

Roscoe Drummond

Solzhenitsyn exposes communist deception

WASHINGTON — Alexander Solzhenitsyn is rendering an invaluable public service in refusing to let Communists cover up the true nature of communism.

In a blunt and revealing press conference in Stockholm, the Nobel prize-winning author of "The Gulag Archipelago," showed that Stalin's reign of terror was not just a nightmarish aberration but that repression is communism's essential companion.

At a time when Communism in the West, as in Italy and France, are seeking to present themselves as loyal to democracy, Solzhenitsyn's warning is timely. He has the scars of years in the Soviet prison camps to prove he knows what he is talking about.

Here is the way he put it in his Stockholm news conference:

It must be said that as the picture as to what was happening in the Soviet Union (under Stalin) became clear in the West, the more these Western circles, particularly the new-Communists, created countermyths and legends. These circles, who had for decades applauded our executioners and our destruction, had to save their position. Everything would have been all right but Stalin spoilt it, they said. He was supposed to have built some kind of false socialism."

But Solzhenitsyn's blazing truth is that Stalin was not false to communism. He proves that Stalin was true to communism in all his acts of terror, that he was true to the teaching and practices of Lenin himself, and that to reject repression is to reject Marxism.

"I see a new theory, a new legend in the West." Solzhenitsyn went on. "First they surrender Stalin while Lenin is defended. But now it is difficult to defend Lenin so they surrender him, too, and retreat to the next trenchline and defend Marx. Marx writes: "Democracy is more frightening than monarchy and the aristocracy. Political freedom is a false freedom. With universal suffrage, it is useless to think of revolution. After coming to power there is terror!"

Solzhenitsyn reminds us that Lenin turned Soviet guns on Russian Communists who were not doing his bidding. Stalin liquidated three million Russian farmers because he did not like what they were doing. The Cambodian Communists expelled several million men, women and children — many infirm men and pregnant women — from their homes to perish in the countryside, an action described by The London Daily Telegraph as "one of the greatest tragedies of modern time."

Solzhenitsyn summed it up in these incandescent words:

"When they (the Communists) abandoned Lenin or started to abandon him, they created a myth by which Lenin became the victim of the Russian tradition, i.e., Russia is such that things could not have been otherwise, but with us it will be different. But no, terror is rooted in the teaching itself. This teaching could not produce any fruits other than the ones it has done."

Solzhenitsyn's warning is: Before you embrace communism, know what you are embracing.

High-level officials fear Shah plans oil land takeover

WASHINGTON — U.S. officials at the highest levels are worried that the shah of Iran may be living beyond his means.

His Imperial Majesty envisions himself as the ruler of a modern Persian empire, which once again will become a world power. Toward this end, he is spending his bounteous oil revenues to build a military machine without parallel in the Middle East.

According to the latest confidential estimates, however, the shah's oil reserves, at best, will last for another two decades. This will leave the unpredictable, ambitious, recklessly greedy shah with little more than a down payment on this dream of glory.

Rather than abandon his dream, they fear privately, he may march his U.S. - made army into neighboring Saudi Arabia and Kuwait and annex their oil fields.

Signs of the shah's forthcoming financial embarrassment are everywhere. Since the first of the year, he has been forced to cut back oil production by 15 per cent. He also backed out of a deal to invest heavily in Pan American World Airways. He tried to blame this on Pan Am's internal problems, but diplomatic sources say the shah had "other priorities" for his dwindling money.

For all its oil riches, Iran is also deeply in debt. The shah, according to U.S. officials familiar with his finances, owes about $3 billion in bilateral and multilateral loans.

Even while he is gouging the U.S. taxpayers

Jack Anderson
with Les Whitten

ers for the oil they buy, he is mighty slow in paying the $1.1 billion he owes them. He has $780 million in outstanding debts at the Export-Import Bank alone. Another $230 million in foreign aid loans has never been paid back.

Even more puzzling is a $23 million Lend-Lease debt left over from World War II. The shah has refused to pay it, claiming with perplexing Persian logic that the debt is somehow negated by the "wear and tear" the Allies wreaked upon his railroad system during the war.

Iran owes additional millions in agricultural loans. Commonly Credit Corporation loans and interest due on his debts. Yet he has repaid the U.S. taxpayers for their generosity by leading the clamor inside the oil cartel for higher prices.

The threatened price boost in September, government economists have warned privately, will halt America's economic recovery in its tracks. Already, the oil squeeze has caused the United States more damage than any blow since World War II. The shah more than any other single individual was responsible.

Driven by his grandiose dreams and schemes, the shah has issued royal decrees ordering his subjects to work harder and waste less. At the same time, he has boosted his defense spending to a record $8 billion annually. That's a tremendous 44 per cent increase over last year.

The United States has sold him the bulk of his armaments — $6 billion worth in the past two years alone. Indeed, the General Accounting Office has warned that the "extensive sale" of military skills to Iran "could adversely affect the readiness status of United States forces."

What does the shah plan to do with his mushrooming military apparatus? For the record, he talks about being the peaceful protector of the Persian Gulf. But when the British pulled out of the island of Abu Musa — which was claimed by the sheikhdom of Sharish — the shah didn't bother about negotiations. He simply seized the strategic island and began fortifying it.

He also was able to rush a 1,500-man force to the opposite end of the Persian Gulf to help the sultan of Oman quell a guerrilla rebellion. Now the shah has a huge Hovercraft fleet, purchased from Britain. He can send a battalion of troops across the Persian Gulf and land them in Saudi Arabia or Kuwait within half an hour.

This is precisely what some high officials fear he will do.

Talking Back: We always seek the comments of those we write about. Earlier this month, we identified various Soviet newsmen, including Izvestia's ponderous Washington correspondent Stanislav Kondrashov, as KGB spies. Kondrashov never returned our calls.

In another column, we reported that Rep. Larry McDonald, D-Ga., the Clown Prince of the House, had squandered $40,000 of the taxpayers' money this year to print scurrilous, unproven attacks on assorted victims in the Congressional Record. Two of our reporters tried but failed to coax him off the House floor to comment.

No both Kondrashov and McDonald have belatedly responded — Kondrashov in Izvestia and McDonald in the Congressional Record. We are happy to summarize their statements.

"Jack Anderson," wrote Kondrashov, "is the leader in the unclever but vehement competition . . . at discrediting international detente and spoiling the atmosphere of Soviet-U.S. relations." He accused us of being anti-Soviet.

McDonald had a different opinion of us. "It is clear," he declared, "that the real motivating factor behind Anderson's ire is (opposition to aims) exposing extremist and Marxist-Leninist threats and tactics." He accused us of being pro-Soviet.

our five-year-olds can handle the full days every other day.

I would encourage the parents who feel as I do to contact the school district by phone or preferably by letter to make their views known. I hope that the school district will not yield to a pressure group which is not representative of the majority of parents of kindergarten-age children.

CONCERNED MOTHER
Stroudsburg

Where are the lids?

Editor, The Record:

Early in the month of July I canvassed an area of 20-mile radius seeking dome lids for canning.

Upon each inquiry I was met with the reply, they are on order. Since that occasion I have written to two manufacturing companies of these items. I received a reply from one saying they have increased production over last year's output and also are operating on a 24-hour scale.

The letter also stated that the lids have been shipped to the wholesale houses, so if the merchants have ordered from the wholesale house, they have to be either place.

Also I placed a phone call to Southern Pennsylvania to a relative in that area and she hasn't been able to purchase any either.

On the other hand some information has reached me that through "connections" some people have been able to get these items. If this is the case, then some of us housewives are being discriminated against.

Also to add to the dilemma, my string bean crop came on and due to the lack of lids I have approximately three bushels of them that I've had to let go on the vines, which in my estimation is a waste of food.

Perhaps an investigation of all stores and wholesale houses may yield a solution.

Pledges loyalty to new government

Ex-Nigeria leader accepts ouster

KAMPALA, Uganda (UPI) — The ousted leader of Nigeria pledged full support Wednesday to the men who deposed him in a bloodless coup and seized control of black Africa's biggest and richest nation.

Lagos Radio, meanwhile, told workers to report to their normal places of work following the one-day forced "holiday" Tuesday, the day of the coup.

The radio in the Nigerian capital said Brig. Gen. Murtala Rufai Mohammed, the new chief of state, would address the nation on radio and television in the evening.

Smiling and surprisingly relaxed, deposed Nigerian leader Maj. Gen. Yakubu Gowon told reporters in Kampala: "From all indications there is a new government established in Nigeria."

"I wish to state I have also accepted the change and pledge my full loyalty to the nation and the new government."

Gowon was attending the Organization of African Unity in the Ugandan capital, 2,000 miles from his home, when the coup occurred.

Dressed in traditional African robes, he met newsmen Wednesday and said: "In the overall interest of the nation and country I appeal to all Nigerians to cooperate with the new government for the preservation of peace, unity and stability in the country."

He added he was "prepared to serve my country in any capacity. I am a professional soldier and will fulfill any duty I am called upon to do."

"I thank all the people of Nigeria for the support you gave me and call upon you to give the new government the same support you gave me."

He concluded his prepared statement by saying: "Long live one united, happy and prosperous Nigeria."

The general refused to answer all newsmen's questions, but pressed, he quoted Shakespeare: "All the world's a stage. And all the men and women merely players. They have their exits and their entrances."

Then he added: "Please pray for Nigeria and for me. We will meet again."

Puppy business booming

Going to dogs can be profitable

MANHATTAN, Kan. (UPI) — Going to the dogs is a means of making extra money these days in Kansas.

The Kansas State University Extension Service reports Kansas, the nation's top commercial dog producing state, annually sells $10 million worth of puppies to 3,600 pet shops in the United States.

Many farm wives have entered the business of raising puppies to supplement income.

Dr. Marvin Samuelson, KSU assistant professor in small animal medicine, said Tuesday consumer demand for high quality puppies is increasing.

"Part of the reason is because of increased leisure time," Samuelson said. "The biggest market is among newly married couples."

He said most dog producers are farmers who need a supplemental income, but many commercial producers simply enjoy raising dogs.

Mrs. Jim Clawson of Jewell County finds dog raising is tranquilizing.

"I used to be a beautician but reached the point where instead of fixing people's hair, I was ready to pull it out," Mrs. Clawson said. "Now whenever I get frustrated, I just go talk to the dogs."

Doctors' insurance cure slow

HARRISBURG (UPI) — Pennsylvania's doctors are expecting a miracle cure if they think the legislature can put an immediate halt to soaring malpractice insurance rates, Insurance Commissioner William Sheppard said Wednesday.

Sheppard was one of the witnesses who appeared before the Senate Insurance Committee, which is holding public hearings on a malpractice bill passed last week by the House.

The bill contains several provisions designed to cut malpractice rates, but Sheppard said any decrease is still several years off.

Miss America pageant loosens swimsuit rule

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (UPI) — For the first time in its 54-year history, the Miss America pageant will allow contestants to be photographed in two-piece swimsuits this year—but not in the formal competition.

Albert A. Marks, chairman of the Executive Committee of the pageant, said Wednesday that bikinis will not be permitted, however.

"We're not going into this whole hog," Marks said. "We're kind of backing into it."

Marks said he surveyed seven former contestants and six said they would like to wear two-piece swimsuits during prepageant photography session but would prefer not to wear such swimsuits during the four days of competition.

rule would increase the interest in photographers.

"I think a lot of photographers are a little too weary of too many set shots."

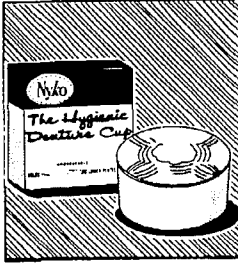

"I can only go by statistics," Sheppard said. "And they say there will not be low rates. What can we do about it? We're charged with giving adequate rates so we can't deny these companies a rate hike. They'll take us right into court and win."

Several county medical societies have threatened to strike unless the legislature acts quickly on a malpractice bill.

The problem began this spring when Sheppard approved a 206 per cent rate hike requested by the Argonaut Insurance Co., which insures 4,000 physicians in Pennsylvania. Argonaut is in serious financial trouble and is trying to get out of the malpractice insurance field.

King slaying case may be reopened

ATLANTA (UPI) — Atlanta Public Safety Commissioner A. Reginald Eaves said Wednesday he had asked the Justice Department to reopen the Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. case despite the fact that his new investigation into King's assassination produced no firm evidence of a conspiracy.

Eaves told a news conference that the month-long probe by the Atlanta police had left many questions unanswered and for that reason he had requested the case be reopened.

The probe by the Atlanta police resulted from a statement by a convicted heroin smuggler.

King was killed in Memphis, Tenn., in 1968 and James Earl Ray was sentenced to 99 years in prison after pleading guilty to the shooting.

Eaves said a convicted heroin smuggler, Robert Byron Watson, 21, had forwarded a 42-page statement to him through comedian Dick Gregory dealing with narcotics trafficking and briefly touching on the King slaying.

Vitamin E: Good or bad?

My husband is on a campaign to make all of us take vitamin E. He is so set on the idea that I wish you would give us the latest information on the value of this vitamin.

Mrs. J.P., N.Y.

Dear Mrs. P.:

A great deal of interest has been created about vitamin E and its value in many existing medical conditions.

To this "wonder vitamin" has been falsely attributed the capacity to treat and prevent heart disease, diabetes, varicose veins, high blood pressure and even arteriosclerosis.

However, there is no validity to claims of the vitamin E enthusiasts.

The American Heart Association, the American Medical Association and the Food and Drug Administration have all reported that vitamin E has no value in heart disease or in any other condition, with the exception of a known vitamin E deficiency.

There is no merit to the myth that vitamin E increases sexual potency, removes scars from the skin and helps to prevent senility and stroke.

The interesting aspect of vitamin E is that it is found in sufficient quantities in the average daily diet. Therefore, it is pointless to buy expensive vitamin E products because of the well-touted advertising that seems to be flourishing today.

I have been told that I may have to have an examination of the inside of my lung with special dyes. I am nervous about this.

Mrs. K.F.Y., Maine

Dear Mrs. Y.:

I don't know whether you are concerned about the procedure itself, or the reason for doing it.

Bronchography is a simple procedure by which special dyes are made to trickle down from the mouth into the trachea, and then into the large and finer branches of the "lung tree."

X-rays are then taken to see if there is free passageway of the flow of the dye into the lungs. It is not a painful procedure. Your anxiety about it should not delay having it done.

Far too many people delay such examinations because of unnecessary anxiety about "what will be found." A better way of looking at it is to think of what will not be found.

DR LESTER COLEMAN has prepared a special booklet entitled "Alcoholism — A Family Disease." It probes this grave problem and offers hopeful advice. For your copy, send 25 cents in coin and a large, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Lester L. Coleman, M.D., (Alcoholism booklet), P.O. Box 5178, Grand Central Station, New York City, 10017. Please mention the booklet by title.

Teacher's notebook

How involved?

By JUDITH GELBER

Enlightened educators know that parents must be involved in their children's education if there is to be any hope of success. However, the question is: Where is the line between essential parental interest and concern and parental meddling in academic affairs that are best left to the professional staff?

Fortunately, the violent and bitter dispute that erupted between parents and the school board in Kanawha County, West Virginia, has not spread to other areas. Parents were angered over textbooks they thought were "dirty" and unpatriotic. The school board thought the books contained realistic portrayals of modern American life and should therefore be included in the curriculum.

This was a classic clash of values between different parts of the community, because other parents felt just as strongly that all points of view should be presented, whether or not the parents and their children agreed with those views.

However, although the violence of Kanawha County has not been repeated, there is growing tension in many areas of the country between schools and groups in the community over curriculum and other educational goals. As a result, there is a growing tendency for parents to organize and to voice their opinions in areas which many educators feel are outside the bounds of parental concern.

(A.) Don't judge a girl by facial or physical beauty alone.

If you like a girl and she likes you, you will discover that beauty can include qualities other than just looks.

And do not wait for a girl to approach you and indicate she likes you. Even if she does like you she probably won't do that. If you like her, approach her, talk to her and ask her for a date. She may say no, but again, she may say yes.

Dress-trouser set can solve dilemma

PARIS (UPI) — Designer Emanuel Ungaro solved the problem Tuesday of whether a woman should wear a dress or trousers. He says wear both.

The Italian-born designer's message in his winter high fashion show was a tube dress over skinny pants.

The same idea slipped into the Tuesday shows of two other designers, Hubert de Givenchy and Louis Feraud, possibly one of those odd coincidences in the fashion world.

Ungaro's dress-trouser outfit revived his old layered look and his habit of mixing unmatched prints. He started with soft mohair striped trousers, a checked shirt and man's necktie. Over that went a tubular dress with cap sleeves. On top of that was piled a hooded coat like an Arab robe, the hood striped inside to match the pants — or was it the dress?

Then you add a long thin fringed scarf, if you're not too tired.

The mohair came in edible colors such as caramel, honey and chocolate.

The nearest things to classic suits were belted tunics and narrow skirts in contrasting wool prints.

The veteran house of Chanel at last got back on the track with a first-class collection after a few years of stumbling following the death of designer Gabriele (Coco) Chanel in 1971.

The classic suits once again were in the spirit of Mademoiselle Chanel. The nubby soft tweeds chosen by stylists Jean Cazaubon and Yvonne Dudel were much more in the spirit of the traditional Chanel fabrics than those chosen in their previous three tries or by others who have tried to run the salon.

The fashion reporters judged the tailoring as perfection. Back are the pleated blouses that match the jacket linings, the chain belts and necklaces and the little gold Chanel buttons.

New conceptions included knitted multicolored jackets worn with skirts or with simple black wool dresses. The dresses dripped with chain necklaces and belts.

The traditional Chanel narrow look fits right in with the current tube trend that has swept this week's winter fashion showings.

Designer Feraud, a favorite of the younger generation, made most of his winter collection in snowy white — white bulky knitted coats with white fox collars and white silk dresses etched with tiny black lines like lithographs.

Buyers in the crowd liked Feraud's coats, knitted like Norwegian ski sweaters.

LaLeche meets

MOUNT POCONO — The Mount Pocono Morning LaLeche League will meet at 10 a.m. Wednesday at the home of Mary Altomese, Pocono Pines, 648-2646. The topic of discussion will be "Baby Arrives: The Family and the Breastfed Baby."

Families asked to host

Exchange students need homes

STROUDSBURG — Youth for Understanding, an educational organization cooperating with the U.S. Department of State, is looking for homes in the Monroe County area for exchange students.

The organization, which has placed students in the Pleasant Valley School District in the past, is also planning to form a committee of local citizens to help facilitate further exchanges from abroad and from America.

The organization has a local representative in Anne Stafford of Brodheadsville.

This year, the organization has found itself with more students coming from abroad than families to taken them in.

Families have declined to accept students after placement, said Mrs. Fred Alexander, regional head of the organization, chiefly for economic reasons. Three students slated for this area have had difficulty obtaining homes.

Mrs. Alexander hopes to place five students in the Stroudsburg area for the next school year. Families who would like to take an exchange student into their homes will do so on a year basis. The student will attend the local high school; each student must have school clearance before placement.

Families who take exchange students must be of "good, sound moral character," according to Mrs. Alexander. They must provide references and have the financial ability to feed a student for the year. Families are preferred who have teenaged children; but teen offspring are not a necessity.

Students who come from abroad (or who exchange from the United States) are between 15 and 18 years of age. They must be above average academically—a student must have a 3.5 grade point average. Two years of foreign language training and an aptitude for languages is necessary. They must "show a genuine interest in living with an adapting to a foreign experience," according to organizational brochures.

Students must apply to the organization and present references. A medical exam is necessary. An interview and orientation are conducted. Students who are accepted undergo an intensive language training.

Following are four short biographies of students who are in need of homes:

Mario Rono, 15, is from the Philippines. He is captain of the high school band and center on the basketball team. He likes to swim, ride, and fish and plays the piano and organ.

Jahani Ranni, 17, is from Vantaa, Finland. He is from a middleclass Finnish family. He has been a Boy Scout and participates in track and field events. A baseball player, he like biology best in school and plans to study medicine.

Gertrud Andersson, 17, is from Danderyd, Sweden. She is active in scouting, basketball, sailing club, skiing club and is chairman of her class. Other hobbies are languages, sewing, music and knitting. Gertrud speaks French, German and English.

Johann Zetterlund, 18, is from Ornskoldsvik, Sweden, and is one of four brothers. He enjoys sports, especially skiing, sailing, soccer and basketball. He also draws and paints. He would like to become a gymnastics teacher.

There is also a German girl looking for a host family who like to canoe and ski.

Families interested in hosting an exchange student should call Mrs. Stafford at 421-4807 or Mrs. Alexander at 201-431-2444. Persons interested in joining the committee should call the same numbers.

McDade asks canning lid

WASHINGTON — Rep. Joseph M. McDade (R-10) has sponsored a resolution calling upon the Attorney General to conduct an investigation into possible anti-trust violations in the manufacture and marketing of replacement home canning lids.

"I have received numerous complaints from residents throughout the 10th District concerning the total unavailability of home canning lids," McDade said. "Home canners who have jars from past years cannot find new lids to use this year."

"Home gardening has increased dramatically this year as a result of inflation and President Ford's emphasis on WIN gardens," he said. "Ironically, in this year where there has been such an emphasis on saving and sacrifice, those who have worked at home gardening now have no way to preserve the fruits of their labors."

McDade pointed out that "although lids cannot be purchased separately, there is a projected surplus of over 100 million of the more expensive jar and lid combinations. There have been repeated complaints of the black marketing, back-of-truck sales at double the retail price, and under-the-counter sales to 'preferred' customers," he explained.

Beef prices climb

No food price dip in sight

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Food Editor

A ray of hope for somewhat lower beef prices this fall was seen in the New York City Department of Consumer Affairs market basket report this week, but news of retail food costs generally was grim.

Steadily rising beef prices were typified by ground chuck, which ranged between $1.05 and $1.49 a pound in 18 cities on UPI's regular survey of 17 commonly used foods. Even so, the week's low of 67 cents a pound in Los Angeles was 28 cents below the average recorded during the base week of March 18.

The New York prediction of possibly lower beef prices was based on a U.S. Department of Agriculture report of record numbers of cattle being prepared for market.

A consumer comparison shopping round the nation would find the best buy in chicken this week in Los Angeles and San Diego, where whole broilers sold for 48 cents a pound, 10 cents below the average last spring. They were only 59 cents a pound in four other cities, but 83 in Boston and 85 in Portland, Ore.

The USDA's monthly food marketing alert predicted that pork output next month probably will average 18 to 20 percent below that of a year ago, and well under the 1972-74 average for August. Loin and pork chops were 99 cents a pound in a Little Rock market, but $1.39 to $2.29 elsewhere.

Even the price of sugar, which had been declining slowly, has started up again, just in time to put a crimp in home preserving, canning and freezing of plentiful peaches and other fresh fruit. Still, the low of $1.07 for a five-pound bag of a national brand in a Los Angeles supermarket was less than half of last March's average of $2.26.

New sandwich king reigns over bread

NEW YORK — Thomas R. Giancoli, Executive Chef at the Riverside Inn, a restaurant and night club, in Tukwila, Washington, near Seattle, was named the 1975 Sandwich King Wednesday at a special Coronation Luncheon at the St. Regis Roof.

As the winner of the 20th annual National Sandwich Idea Contest, Giancoli won continental travel for two, plus $500 spending money. He and three other top finalists already had received $500 and the trip to New York City for the coronation ceremonies.

Other finalists were: — LeRoy Sam Blanchard, Chef Tournant, Sheraton Waikiki Hotel in Honolulu, Hawaii with his entry, "LeRoy Ole." — Adolph E. Elges, Restaurant Manager, Fosters-West Restaurants, San Francisco, California, with "Mediterranean Seawich."

— Marsha M. Wolford, Cook at Lord Fletcher's of the Lake, Spring Park, Minnesota, near Minneapolis, with "Vegetarian Deli."

Giancoli's winning sandwich, "Old China Town Pork Burger," is a blend of pork, water chestnuts, chopped green pepper, onion, ginger, soy sauce, garlic and dry sherry. The pork mixture is shaped into patties, grilled and served on enriched sesame seed buns with bean sprouts and a sweet and sour sauce.

The rising popularity of Chinese cooking and flavors inspired 55-year-old Giancoli to create "Old China Town Pork Burger." The China Town neighborhoods of many cities, their character and charm, suggested the name.

This is the second time Giancoli has reigned as the Sandwich King. He first won the scepter in 1968 with his creation, "Sweet Adeline."

Claire Schuler weds John Zimmerman

NEOLA — Claire Elaine Schuler and John Matthew Zimmerman were married July 12 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Schuler, grandparents of the bride, Neola.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clair E. Schuler, 214 Smith St., East Stroudsburg. The bridegroom is the son of Layton A. Zimmerman, Minisink Hills, and the late Mrs. Jane R. Zimmerman.

Mrs. Bobbi Miller, East Stroudsburg, was matron of honor; Miss Lorrie Schuler, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Miss Darla Schuler, sister of the bride, and Miss Kathy Fredrick, East Stroudsburg, were bridesmaids. Miss Sheri Fredrick, East Stroudsburg, was junior bridesmaid. George A. Miller, Sr., East Stroudsburg, was best man. Layton James and Jeffrey Zimmerman, brothers of the groom, and John Sibley, Jr., East Stroudsburg, were ushers. Chris Steinmetz, Minisink Hills, was junior usher.

Laura Lynn Kulba, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. John Kulba, East Stroudsburg, was flower girl and Clair Schuler, Jr., brother of the bride, was ring bearer.

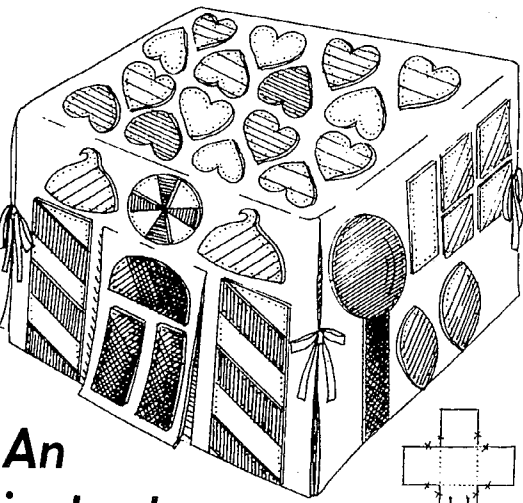

A reception for 150 guests was held at the VFW Post Home, Stroudsburg.

The bride and groom are both graduates of East Stroudsburg High School.

A wedding trip to West Virginia is planned.

The couple will make their home in Minisink Hills.

An instant 'candy' house

By PHYLLIS FIAROTTA

Hansel and Gretel loved that fabulous candy house. Who wouldn't? You can create an instant gingerbread fun house with this card table converter. Caution: you may just lose your children to the spell of this super sweet cottage once they are inside it, especially if there is a milk and cookie feast waiting for them.

1. The table cover is made in five sections. The small diagram shows how to sew the sections together.
2. Choose inexpensive fabric. Be sure that the width of the fabric is wide enough to accommodate the largest side of the table. Measure the sides to be sure, before you buy the fabric. Brown is an ideal color.
3. The candy and window appliques are cut from scrap fabric or felt. They can be hand or machine-stitched. Felt appliques can be sewn to the base shapes without hemming. Fabric appliques can also be sewed without hemming, with the zigzag machine stitch.

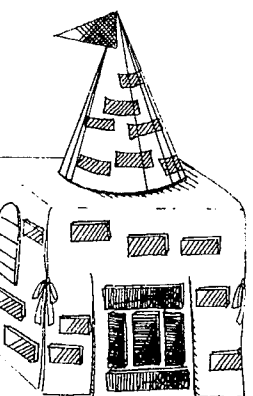

4. Measure the top of the card table and cut out a section of fabric this size plus an additional 1 inch on all sides.
5. Measure the distance of the table top to the floor as well as from leg to leg. Cut out four sections of fabric to these measurements plus 1/2 inch on all sides.
6. Sew heart-shaped roof shingles in pastel shades to the center base shape. If you are ambitious, you can embroider sayings on each heart.
7. The "door" of the front panel is cut as shown in the diagram.
8. Sew white candy cane poles with red stripes on either side of the door. Add gray chocolate kisses and a peppermint wheel above the door which also has decorative appliques.
9. The remaining side panels are decorated lavishly with lollipop trees, spearmint leaves, candy flowers and a window or two with shutters.
10. Sew the sides of the house to the roof (center of the house) with 1/2-inch seams, slitting the corners of the roof shape slightly. Ease in the sides when sewing.

11. Sew bias tape around the raw edges of the house, including the door. You can also sew a 1/4-inch seam all around.

12. Sew lengths of ribbon, about one-third of the way down from the top, to each side (x on diagram).

13. Place the cover centered over the card table and tie the ribbons in bows. Kids enter the cottage through the door.

KING ARTHUR'S CASTLE

This card table cover can be converted into King Arthur's castle. Choose gray fabric for the cover. Sew dark grey or blue brick shapes, door panels and dome-shaped windows to the sides.

Make a large paper cone (use oaktag sold at stationery stores) and glue a triangle flat to the top of the cone. Glue gray paper bricks to the cone (or cones) on top of the table when the castle cover is in place.

Recycling pickup scheduled

MILFORD — The Pike County 4-H recycling project has scheduled another pickup Aug. 16 at the following places: Hemlock Farms Teen Center; Schooley's Store, Blooming Grove; Smith Hall, Green-Dreher-Sterling Fairgrounds; and Paupack Elementary Center.

Collections will be from 10 a.m. to noon.

Newspaper and aluminum will be collected. Aluminum containers are often mixed up with tin cans. The 4-H Clubs remind recyclers that aluminum is non-magnetic and the cans have rounded bottoms with no separate bottom or side seams. They are lightweight and easily crushed.

Aluminum containers should be washed and crushed before depositing them at the recycling centers.

The 4-H clubs in the county have begun this project with a grant from Reader's Digest.

Patriotic fest slated at church

BEAKLEYVILLE — A program of patriotic songs will be presented at 7:30 p.m. Saturday at the Beakleyville Baptist Church.

The program will be directed by Mike Burriel, a student at Liberty Baptist College. Burriel and his group of 20 singers are touring the East.

The young people of Beakleyville will hold a dinner at the church for the ensemble and the church young people.

Cut grass too good to waste

By GEORGE ABRAHAM

GRASS CLIPPINGS AGAIN: Recently we said it was a good idea to gather the clippings from your lawn and use them as a mulch. Several have written to tell us it's a better idea to let the clippings fall to the lawn and remain as food.

That's a good idea, too. The average person mows his lawn about 36 times a season, and he mows about three feet of grass in height. This can amount to about five tons of grass returned to the soil, or removed for mulching purposes.

Putting grass clippings along the curb for the garbage man to pick up is a mighty foolish practice, especially when many of our soils are crying out for more organic matter which provides food for beneficial worms and organisms.

Incidentally, you'll be interested to know that high quality poultry feed — rich in xanthophyll and carotene — can be prepared by using grass clippings from a golf course. Clippings are high in protein, also. One turf farmer is planning to integrate his turf operation with a new 200,000-bird poultry operation. Besides salvaging the grass clippings he will be able to recycle the manure produced by the chickens for feeding his turf farm.

RUBBER PLANTS: The rubber plant (Ficus) makes a fine house plant, but one thing to remember about it is that it needs good drainage, and never should be overwatered. Too much water causes the bottom leaves immediately to turn yellow, black and drop off.

To avoid this: (1) Put some pebbles into the bottom of the pot for good drainage. (2) Use a soil mixture of one part each of sand, peat and loam (which is ordinary garden soil). A little perlite added to it won't do a bit of harm.

When it comes to watering the rubber plant, it's best to let it get a bit dry, then apply water. It'll withstand dryness to a remarkable degree, and will not tolerate a soggy soil.

Probably a once-a-week watering is ample. Start new plants by cutting off the tip and rooting it in a jug of plain tap water.

GREEN THUMB CLINIC: "We have weeds growing in between stones in our walk. What's a good way to get rid of them?"

ANSWER: Try some kerosene, gasoline, or a weed killer found in your garden store. We hate to recommend weed killers, because most of these will kill all types of vegetation, even in small amounts. Use carefully!

For weeds along a fence you can use old motor oil, Simazine, Diuron, and others which farmers use. Paraquat will kill or burn down weeds, but is dangerous to use, and must be applied periodically.

'Green Thumb' author wins national honor

NAPLES, N.Y. — George (Doc) Abraham has been awarded membership in "The Order of Writers of the Gardener", according to Lyman Duncan, editor of the national magazine.

"The Gardener" is the official journal of the Men's Garden Club of America, a national organization of thousands of dedicated home gardeners.

Writers who are especially adept at providing practical gardening tips for the down-to-earth gardener are selected for "The Order". Abraham is the author of "The Green Thumb" column which appears in this paper and others from coast to coast.

Also, Abraham and his wife, Katy have worked as a team to provide useful gardening information through their radio, television shows and magazine articles. They are the authors of six best selling books on gardening. The latest will appear this fall.

Doc and Katy have been helping home gardeners for nearly 30 years by dispensing horticultural information, and for over a quarter of a century they have conducted a commercial greenhouse and landscape business.

Jaw fear overblown

By GAIL NEVINS

The book and movie Jaws has most certainly become this summer's ubiquitous conversation piece.

After reading through the paperback version an 11-year-old of my acquaintance woke the next morning to say he had dreamed there were sharks in the pool at Shadowbrook — a local swim club frequented by him on sunny days; a husband of the same acquaintance quipped his first assumption was that Jaws told the tale of a husband-wife oratorical confrontation (but that's irrelevant); and a sociologist friend noted for his perennially key observations commented that the film of aquatic terror "certainly holds your attention."

Those bathers dipping their toes into any of the local watering holes, the Delaware or Wallenpaupack, etc., needn't worry, of course, about the looming specter of a great white shark sinking his sharp triangular teeth into their newly tanned anatomy.

Nor indeed do those traveling to the popular east coast salt water beaches for summer vacations or weekends need to curtail the enjoyment of past seaside pleasures.

The men who know sharks best say that caution regarding the fearsome predators is a very healthy thing, but people need not truncate their aquatic recreation because of the sensational best-seller.

Because the heaviest concentration of shark attacks in this country takes place in Florida (partly because of the number of bathers and partly because of the number of sharks) several of the experts reside there.

Dr. Perry Gilbert, director of the Mote Marine Laboratory in Sarasota and one of the world's foremost shark experts, says that he "would not swim in any Gulf waters at night, because of the sharks, but I'd swim there during the day without a single qualm."

Dr. David Baldrige, a senior research assistant at the Mote lab compiled a "shark attack file" for the U.S. Navy. Of the 1,165 cases analyzed, 107 were in Florida. The most attacks anywhere occur off of Sydney, Australia.

"You're in much more danger driving your car than you are swimming," says Dr. Samuel H. Gruber, a specialist on shark behavior at the University of Miami's Rosenstiel School of Marine and Atmospheric Sciences. He points out that 25,000 Americans die each year in car accidents.

Sharks kill 15 to 20 persons each year and Florida averages four to 10 attacks. The American Medical Association points out that at least that many people die of bee and wasp stings.

"Your chances of being bitten by a shark," according to Gruber, "are similar to being hit by lightning, but shark attacks are fatal only about half the time."

George A. Llano, of the National Science Foundation in Washington, D.C., states that "the incidence of attack by sharks is no greater than that for land carnivores, but the probability of a rise in shark attacks is greater since increasingly greater numbers of people, with little realization of marine hazards, are entering the sea during the season when sharks are closest to the shore."

No malpractice crisis in Europe

BRUSSELS, July (UPI) — The malpractice problem, which has reached crisis levels in the United States, is a much smaller worry for European doctors.

European medical and bar associations, asked about the malpractice situation, reported that the American doctor's problems — five-figure insurance premiums and seven-figure jury awards — are unknown in Europe.

In Europe, as in America, the number of malpractice suits, the size of the awards and the scale of insurance premiums are all going up. But there they are far below American levels — nowhere, for instance, does an average general practitioner pay more than $160 annually for malpractice insurance.

"Apparently in the States a doctor can be sued if an operation is not successful," an Austrian Medical Association spokesman said. "In Austria, you would have to charge a doctor with the gravest act of negligence before you could sue him. And this is extremely difficult."

Several reasons were given why European doctors, who earn less money on the average than American medics, are free of the malpractice nightmare: — In most countries, it is harder to file a malpractice suit and harder to bring it to trial. In many places, cases are screened first by medical boards or special tribunals.

— Almost always, cases are heard by judges, not by juries. — European lawyers in malpractice suits almost always work for a flat fee, never for a percentage of the settlement.

— The punishment for a doctor convicted of true malpractice is often a reprimand, suspension or loss of medical license, rather than payment of damages.

— Add to this the fact that all European countries have some form of national health or "socialized medicine." Patients, having contributed regularly to a government insurance program, pay little or nothing for actual medical care and drugs, and so are less inclined to demand perfection or to punish the doctor for slip-ups.

In Europe, too, doctors generally are held in more awe than in the United States. "It wouldn't occur to many Europeans to sue their doctor," an American physician based in Belgium said. "The doctor is god here and no patient would question his judgement."

The results are few malpractice suits (about two a month in Italy, which has 111,000 doctors, relatively low awards to patients (a $297,000 award in Britain may be the European record) and low-cost malpractice insurance premiums (from $50 to $160 a year for G.P.'s, up to $1,000 for high-risk specialists) that are less than most doctors pay for auto insurance.

But the malpractice costs, like everything else, are going up.

Le Sou Medical, a French mutual defense fund for doctors, said it made 576 payments, with a top award of $225,000, in 1970, compared to 144 payments with a top of $20,000 in 1962.

In Britain, a spokesman for the Medical Protection Society noted that awards are rising under the impact of inflation, the increasing complexities and dangers of modern medicine, growing complaints about the National Health Service, and a new rule forcing payment of interest on damages from the date a writ is issued.

For instance, he said, a young man who was seriously disabled mentally and physically won $153,600 in a malpractice suit four years ago. A very similar case this year brought damages of $204,000.

Insurance premiums vary from country to country.

In France, a general practitioner pays about $75 a year, with high-risk specialists like plastic surgeons paying up to $1,000. In Britain, the Protection Society and the Medical Defense Union offer insurance for a flat fee of $60 — up from $28 a few years ago and expected to rise again soon.

Italian doctors pay annual premiums ranging from $64 for a general practitioner to $160 for a specialist and his team. In Austria, the top premium for a surgeon is $153.

In Sweden, county councils insure doctors for free. Any doctor can buy extra private insurance for $18 a year.

In West Germany, private malpractice insurance is available but many doctors work for hospitals which pay the premiums.

American doctors have blamed lawyers for seeking maximum possible damages because they get a percentage of the settlement. In Europe, this practice is almost unknown. In Holland and many other nations, attorneys work for flat fees set by law or by their bar associations.

Although the malpractice situation varies from nation to nation, the systems in Sweden and France are typical.

In Sweden, an irate patient goes first to his county medical board which investigates to see if a malpractice charge is justified. If the board finds the doctor guilty, it can warn or suspend him or bar him from practice.

There were 833 "questions or complaints" about Sweden's 7,000 doctors and 15,000 nurses in 1974. Only after the medical board upholds a complaint may the patient file an actual damage suit in court.

In France, patients may sue a doctor before administrative courts called Conseils d'Etat. If the doctor loses, the Conseil tells the Medical Association to bring sanctions against him, ranging from fines to loss of license.

In West Germany, cases are relatively rare but may increase now with the recent creation of a "patient's protective association." But German doctors and insurance companies in Bavaria are experimenting with a "mediation board," available on a voluntary basis to reach an out-of-court settlement.

In Britain, most malpractice cases are settled out of court. One reason is that it may take a case six years to come to trial.

Patients in Holland may either start a disciplinary action against a doctor before a special disciplinary court, made up of medical and legal experts, or file a civil suit for damages before normal courts.

A spokesman for the Medical Disciplinary Board said it received "not many cases."

Few malpractice cases have been reported in Belgium, but patients have the legal right to take doctors before either civil or criminal courts. The Public Health Ministry said the Order of Physicians automatically investigates any doctor found guilty of malpractice to see if he should be suspended.

In Italy, most cases end in acquittal for the doctor, a legal expert for the Federation of Italian Medical Associations said. About 55 per cent of all doctors carry insurance.

Trader Jacob Bartlesville, Okla., headquarters of Phillips Petroleum Co., was named for Jacob Bartles, who established a trading post nearby in 1839.

In South Africa, all practice suits are screened by medical councils "which have a shrewd idea whether the charges are true or false," a malpractice expert said. "If the claimants persist with the suit, the doctors will go to court. In 99 per cent of the cases, the claimants lose."

If a doctor is convicted in court, he must also appear before the South African Medical Council which rules whether ethical misconduct was involved.

Your Horoscope

Frances Drake

ARIES (March 21 to April 20) — Mars auspicious. You can accomplish a great deal now. Plan, negotiate, call meetings, consider propositions which seem to have good potentialities.
TAURUS (April 21 to May 21) — In dealings with associates, especially members of the opposite sex: patience and tact! An excellent period for utilizing your ability to make smart moves.
GEMINI (May 22 to June 21) — Control your imagination while you also develop its tremendous potentials for furthering your advancement. Don't let random ideas lead you out of bounds.
CANCER (June 22 to July 23) — A "mark-time" period for some matters; for others, a definite need for pressing forward. Be your usual discriminating self in deciding the urgency of each situation.
LEO (July 24 to August 23) — Good solar influences should make this a day of stimulating action. But don't overtax yourself. Make some time for relaxation.
VIRGO (August 24 to September 23) — Don't lighten your wallet in an effort to impress others. In fact, wading out of your depth financially in any way would be extremely foolish now.
LIBRA (September 24 to October 23) — It may be advisable to slacken your gait in order to detect error of method or details overlooked. But don't stop dead. Keep working toward ultimate objectives.
SCORPIO (October 24 to November 23) — Don't head into any complications. Steer a clear course and focus ambitions on an attainable plateau. Don't strive for the unreasonable.
SAGITTARIUS (November 23 to December 21) — Business matters, difficult tasks, long-range planning favored now. But don't rush into things. Have patience, be vigilant and precise.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20) — Competition is still on the move. Get with it and gear yourself to the demands which are appropriate.
AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19) — Gains from past good efforts indicated, but don't rest on your laurels. There are further goals to reach, so keep on giving your best.
PISCES (February 20 to March 20) — Generous influences on the whole. Both artistry and imagination stimulated. Use both well and results will please.
YOU BORN TODAY are the type who can take the world by storm through your ingenuity and dash. You are endowed with personality-plus, and your courage, independence and generosity are outstanding. You will share your assets with others, but often demand your own way in exchange — and obstinately. Try to overcome this, along with excessive pride, in your achievements.

Opening lead — six of hearts.

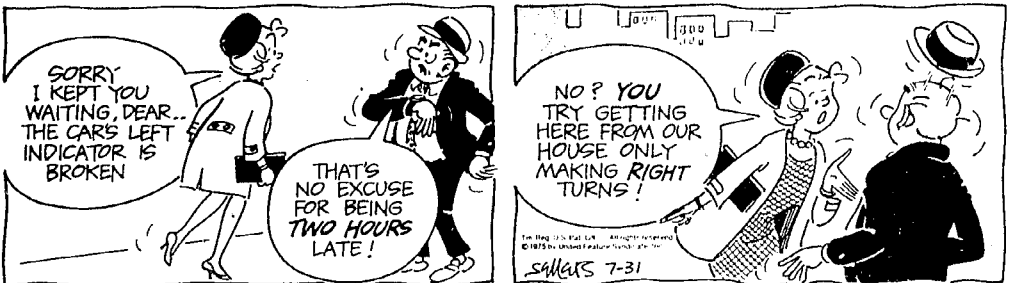

Yesterday we discussed this deal from the match between France and Canada in the 1968 world championship. We showed how Bourchoff, the French declarer, made four trump for 630 points by shrewdly judging to play the queen of clubs first, instead of a low club to the king.

When the Canadian North-South pair (Kehela and Murray) played the hand, they got to six clubs on the bidding shown. (East's double of three clubs was for takeout.)

Again East won the six of hearts lead and returned the jack. Murray took the king, discarding a diamond from dummy, and led the queen of clubs, followed by a low club to West's nine and dummy's king.
After playing a low spade to the ace and drawing West's two trumps with the aid of a finesse, Murray played the king and another spade, hoping to find the suit divided 3-3. But the spades proved to be divided 4-2 and Murray eventually went down one for a team loss of 370 points.
Later analysis revealed that the slam could have been made by a somewhat exotic line of play. Instead of leading a low spade to the ace at trick five, declarer could have led the jack instead.
East covers with the queen, won by the ace, and declarer takes two more rounds of trumps, cashes dummy's king of spades and continues with the eight. East's nine of spades gets trapped and South finishes the hand with twelve tricks, consisting of four spades, a heart, two diamonds and five clubs.
It all goes to show how much easier it is to play a hand with 52 cards in plain view. Hindsight is clearly better than foresight.

Silicone question

This morning I read a wire story which I am enclosing. I couldn't believe my eyes. It says the state of Wisconsin paid for silicone injections for an aspiring go-go dancer who "lacked the necessary equipment" to land a job. The dancer was listed as "disabled" until the silicone treatments enlarged her breasts. She is now gainfully employed.

If they kill Tocks and everybody still comes to visit...

By STEVE DRACHLER
Pocono Record Reporter

PHILADELPHIA — Governors of the four Delaware River basin states have been presented plans for a Delaware Water Gap National Recreation Area (DWGNRA) without Tocks Island Lake in the middle of it.

Three alternatives were sent to each governor and the secretary of the federal Interior Department last Thursday, according to David Kimball, chief National Park Service planner for the Mid-Atlantic Region.

Kimball said Wednesday the plans were sent to the Delaware River Basin Commission commissioners so they could see the range of possibilities for the recreation area without a 10,000 acre lake.

The governors of New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware and a representative from the Department of the Interior are meeting today in Newark, N.J. to discuss the Tocks Island issue.

The four governors are required to submit their recommendations on Tocks to Congress by August 28.

Today's meeting will be the first time Pennsylvania Gov. Milton Shapp, N.J. Gov. Brendan Byrne, New York

Gov. Hugh Carey and Del. Gov. Sherman Tribbett have gotten together to consider exclusively the controversial Tocks Island issue. They comprise the river basin commission.

The governors are expected to give their positions on the project following the private meeting. Shapp is the only one to favor the dam. Byrne has said he is unconvinced the dam is needed and Tribbett and Carey say they will follow Byrne's lead.

Whatever is decided on Tocks Island, the National Park Service still expects there will be a recreation area along the Delaware River from Delaware Water Gap to north of Milford.

To prepare itself for the possibility Tocks might be scrapped, Kimball said the Park Service began gathering data a year ago and in December, 1974, started to prepare alternatives that did not include a lake.

Major differences in the three alternative sketches submitted to the governors deal mainly with traffic circulation, Kimball said.

They are:

— An alternative proposed last year by the Save the Delaware Coalition, an anti-Tocks lobby. This alternative sets up several recreational zones throughout the recreation area. Transportation would be provided by public transit.

— A second alternative would have visitors to the recreation area provide their own transportation, with no public transit available.

— The third proposal calls for visitors to park providing their own transportation along the Pennsylvania side of the Delaware River — assuming Rte. 209 is relocated. Old Rte. 209 would then be for park traffic. Public transit would move people about in the New Jersey portion of the recreation area.

Peak visitation to the recreation area would likely change without Tocks Island Lake, Kimball said.

"With the change in development for the park, it would appear that use would be of a low-key nature," he said.

"We have projected the area would accommodate 35,000 persons a day when the park was fully developed — a good many years from now," Kimball said.

Without Tocks the recreational nature of the park will change, according to the planner.

Concentrated areas for swimming and boating will naturally be reduced, he said. Swimming areas will be smaller and power boating much more limited than with a 10,000-acre lake inside of a 72,000 acre park.

However, Kimball said the recreation area is "just as viable without the dam than with it."

DWGNRA without Tocks would compare on a much smaller scale to the Shenandoah National Park in Virginia, Kimball said. It would also compare to several national scenic rivers. A 75-mile stretch of the Delaware River north of the proposed Tocks Lake has been proposed to be included in the nation's wild and scenic rivers.

Impacts on the surrounding counties in Pennsylvania, New Jersey and to a lesser degree, in New York will be changed without Tocks Lake, Kimball said.

"The many impacts are dependent on the type of use the area will receive. It depends on how many people you want in it," he added.

If the governors decide they don't want Tocks to proceed, and Congress agrees the recreation area should be continued, the park service hopes to begin planning from scratch, Kimball said.

He said the park service will hold many public workshops and will try to mold the recreation area around what the public desires.

Monroe cemetery ruled out

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Gouldsboro State Park as well as four other possible sites for a national cemetery and shrine in Pennsylvania have been ruled out, mostly due to unsuitable soil, according to a Veterans Administration spokesman in Washington, D.C.

Charles Lucas of the VA public information office said Wednesday the 750-acre site in Gouldsboro State Park was rejected by an architectural and engineering survey team due to poor soil and large boulders at the site.

Lucas said the engineers reported the entire surface of the Gouldsboro tract is covered with rocks, that there is no topsoil and that the entire site is wooded and would require "great expense" to prepare.

Lucas said only about 210 acres of the site could be used for graves.

Also rejected as possible sites were Allenwood, Ft. Necessity, Indiantown Gap and Valley Forge. Lucas said the terrain at Valley Forge was acceptable but that its present attraction as a national historic site made it incompatible with being a cemetery.

Lucas said the VA is considering alternate sites near Valley Forge and Allenwood and will send inspection teams to investigate.

He said Gov. Milton Shapp's committee on site selection has been urged to recommend other possible sites within a 50-75 mile radius of the Philadelphia area, the region of the highest veteran population.

Lucas said the VA still expects to have some of the work on the cemetery and shrine completed by July 1976 in time for the Bicentennial.

ESSC to mark bicen

EAST STROUDSBURG — Plans are now being finalized at East Stroudsburg State College for two days of convocations to be held September 24 and 25 to begin the year-long observance of the nation's bicentennial.

The September 24 and 25 convocations mark the first in a series of special programs to be offered during the academic year to commemorate the nation's bicentennial. Programs are tentatively planned throughout the year during which nationally and internationally known speakers will be brought to the campus for the benefit of both the college community and the geographical area served by the college.

A committee of faculty, staff and students has been meeting since last fall to plan the Bicentennial activities of the college. The general theme for the college programs will be, "America: Past, Present and Future."

Tentatively scheduled to speak at the fall convocations is Dr. Loren Eiseley, a nationally-known anthropologist and distinguished writer who serves as the Benjamin Franklin Professor of Anthropology and the History of Science at the University of Pennsylvania. He also serves there as Curator of Early Man at the University museum.

UNEASY RIDER — It's only horsesense to Samuel Litts that a man who lives in the country should have a place to ride his horse. Litts would like horse trails throughout the area and plans to take his cause to county commissioners. (Staff photo by Jeff Widmer)

Monroe rangers ride tall for more than a lone path

By JEFF WIDMER
Pocono Record Reporter

SCIOTA — Samuel Litts Sr. is not horsing around when he says in a few years, there won't be a place to ride in Monroe County.

A retired Sand Hill R.D. 2 man who sees developments replacing prime horseback riding trails, Litts is asking county commissioners to preserve a path for equestrians.

Litts has written commissioners and asked them to seek funds to set aside trails for riders and snowmobilers, and his riding partner, Fran Dorshimer of Brodheadsville, said she plans to meet with commissioners to discuss the issue.

"If you ask permission to ride on someone's property, they usually will give you permission," Miss Dorshimer said. "We can ask them for a group, but we can't ask them for the public (as a whole)."

"We've also had a few set-tos with property owners. Personally, I'd settle for a five-foot strip along the blacktop. That would be in the right of way. But some people's lawns come right down to the road. If you ride on their lawns, the people yell."

Litts said the trouble is, the country just isn't what it used to be anymore. Farmers who used to allow horsemen to ride on their land have to sell their property because taxes are so high. Developers buy the land, and homeowners don't want horses trooping across their lands, he said as he sat on his back porch, a bush of white hair crowding his green checkered shirt, his beard as white as his daughter's horse.

Litts said national and state parks are too far away to ride there. Blacktop roads break or bruise the delicate bones and legs of a horse. Roads are too narrow to ride along, car drivers speed by and spook the horse and few dirt roads exist anymore.

The two suggest the commissioners or other officials approach property owners — like pipeline companies that own right of ways — and establish public riding trails in the county.

Miss Dorshimer said a trail could start at the West End fairgrounds and circle the county. The spot would provide secure parking for horse trailers, and a coin-operated gate could make money for the fair association, she suggested.

While Litts, a retired McGraw-Edison welder, rescued Miss Dorshimer from Licorice and Boo Boo — two of 10 cats that walked around the barn — Miss Dorshimer confirmed her love of horseback riding.

"You know what they say: 'The outside of a horse is good for the inside of a man.' It (riding) is the best mental therapy. It really is."

Shawnee fights brush fire Playhouse sale complete

SHAWNEE-ON-DELAWARE — A stubborn brush fire kept Shawnee-On-Delaware firemen busy on Mosier's Knob for six hours Wednesday and also required assistance from Bushkill firemen.

Shawnee Chief Richard Kerr said the property, owned by Karl Hope, is being cleared for a ski slope. He said workers set piles of brush on fire and then left. About five acres of timber and brush burned, Kerr said.

The heavy timber continued burning which kept the 15 men and four trucks on the scene from 2:40 to 8:40 p.m. About 800 feet of hose had to be laid to reach the fire which was far back into the woods. Kerr stated.

Open house

EAST STROUDSBURG — The Monroe County Office for the Aging will hold an open house from 2 to 4 p.m. Aug. 1 at 154 Washington St., East Stroudsburg.

Bushkill firemen assisted Shawnee for about 90 minutes with 10 men and two pieces of equipment. The Department of Environmental Resources also assisted with six men.

Playhouse sale complete

STROUDSBURG — Pocono Playhouse in Mountainhome has been sold to Emil Wagner, general manager of Mount Airy Lodge for $195,000, Wagner said Wednesday.

A deed filed in the Monroe County Recorder's Office listed a sale price of $25,000 for a caretaker's house owned by Helen and Richard Cook of Southern Pines, N.C.

Wagner said the sale price of the playhouse itself was $195,000 but that no deed was needed because he purchased the corporation of Pocono Playhouse Inc. from the Cooks.

Road gift could be one way

ALLENTOWN — County and township officials are to learn today what their roles will be when the state turns over several rural roads to the municipalities.

The Pennsylvania Department of Transportation (PennDOT) in Allentown is conducting the informational meeting for the townships involved.

Monroe County Commissioners William Quinn and Arlington Martin will attend the meeting to find out if the county will be affected by the program.

Quinn said it is possible the county could assume responsibility for some of the bridges involved but that he believes they will become the responsibility of whatever townships assumes the roads.

Quinn said he doesn't know exactly what the program will entail which is why he is going to the meeting.

He said the program could result in added highway costs for townships because they will have more miles of roads to be responsible for.

Quinn said the state reimburses townships about $100 a mile a year for maintenance but the cost of road upkeep is usually higher, depending on the condition of the road's surface, shoulders and base.

Quinn said he believes most of the roads considered for return to townships are rural roads.

Today's meeting will include representatives from the counties of Monroe, Carbon, Berks, Northampton, Schuylkill and Lehigh which make up PennDOT's district five.

'No one ever gave money to beautify this town'

STROUDSBURG — "I have some money here I don't know what to do with," said Dr. Bruce Dunlop, chairman of the beautification committee of the borough's Planning and Zoning Commission.

"I have these checks from United Penn Bank," he continued. "They're made out to the Stroudsburg Beautification Committee."

He showed the planning commission three checks, one for $10, one for $5 and one for $20.

Planning consultant Victor Rodite explained the bank was giving out $5 gift certificates to participating stores downtown with new accounts. He said the bank offered the option of donating the funds to the beautification committee.

"It raised a legal question," Rodite said. "What is the Planning Commission empowered to do?"

Committee attorney Ralph Matergia will find out what can be done.

Planning commission chairman Murrell Kiefer said perhaps "the beautification committee could be divorced from the Planning Commission so it could be a non-profit corporation and take the money."

Dr. Dunlop said he would write the bank a letter of thanks.

"No one else has ever donated money for beauty in this town — no one," he said.

Doctor to apply personal touch

EAST STROUDSBURG — An East Stroudsburg physician will travel to Washington, D.C. within the next two weeks to make a personal plea to the Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW) to align Monroe County with the Lehigh health planning area.

Dr. Jean Golden said Wednesday she had an appointment for today with Eugene Rubel, director of the Bureau of Health Planning and Resource Development, but that Rubel canceled it.

She said she hopes to be given an appointment for next week with Rubel.

Dr. Golden said she will go to Washington with a community representative who has not yet been selected.

She said the meeting is to provide more specific information to HEW on inpatient and outpatient flows at the General Hospital of Monroe County and to state reasons why medical personnel in the county want to remain affiliated with the Allentown area rather than Scranton-Wilkes-Barre.

In recommendations forwarded to HEW by Dr. Leonard Bachman, state health secretary, Monroe County was to be aligned with Lackawanna and Luzerne Counties. However, Gov. Milton Shapp wrote a letter to HEW requesting that Monroe County be switched from the Scranton health planning area to the Lehigh Valley.

No board, no meeting

STROUDSBURG — The regular meeting of the Monroe County Commissioners has been canceled for today because all the commissioners will be out of town.

Commissioners William Quinn and Arlington Martin will be attending a meeting in Allentown with the Pennsylvania Department of Transportation. Commissioner Nancy B. Shukaitis is expected to be in Newark, N.J. for a meeting of the Delaware River Basin Commission on the Tocks Island Dam project.

Dr. Golden said the county would be better off if it was included in health planning to the south because that's where most referral patients are sent now.

"From a medical point of view, there has been very little affiliation with that area," she said referring to Scranton-Wilkes-Barre.

If Monroe County was aligned with the northern counties, it would probably be the last one to get government grants for health planning, she added.

Physicians to the north would get money for patients they were not treating and physicians in the Allentown area would receive no benefit from treating Monroe County patients.

Dr. Golden said the law passed for health service area guidelines includes a provision to take a county out of a planning area if it is not compatible with the rest of the region.

A final decision on boundaries for the planning areas is to be made by HEW by Aug. 15.

Darcy halts Reds' incomplete streak at 45

Sanguillen, Reuss beat Phils, 8-1

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Manny Sanguillen drove in two runs and scored three others in a perfect 5-for-5 night at the plate Wednesday, igniting the Pittsburgh Pirates to an 8-1 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies behind the nine-hit, six-strikeout pitching of southpaw Jerry Reuss.

The victory snapped a nine-game Phillies' winning streak over Pittsburgh and enabled the Pirates to regain a 4 1/2-game lead in the NL East.

Reuss, 12-6, walked only one in going the distance. Steve Carlton, 10-8, took the loss after giving up all seven Pittsburgh runs on eight hits and three walks.

Most of the crowd of 43,260 fans were on their feet in the first inning, waving kerchiefs as part of "Babushka Night," as the Pirates hit Carlton for three hits and two runs.

Sanguillen started the rally with a single and scored on a pop double by Willie Stargell that bounced 200-feet down the left field line. Dave Parker slammed a single to right to drive in Stargell and make the score 2-0.

Ollie Brown's fifth homer of the year gave the Phillies their lone run in the sixth.

Palace Tavern champ

STROUDSBURG — Denny Hollinger allowed just three hits and struck out 13 Wednesday in hurling the Palace Bar to a 2-1 Pocono Tavern Softball League victory over Chesie's, clinching the league title for the Palace.

In other games, B.J. Inn beat Leggeri's, 13-7, and Stroud Manor defeated Stumble Inn, 6-1.

John Pabst drove in the first run and scored the eventual winning run for Palace, which won its ninth straight.

Bobby Diehl and Steve Martz both homered to lead B.J. in its victory. Russ Hooley hurled a three-hitter and Paul Frailey and Jim DeAngelo both homered for Stroud Manor. Ted Eliber suffered the loss.

Mets' starter Randy Tate walked three men in the opening inning, but was not scored on. With two out in the second and a 2-0 lead he walked Larry Lintz and Curtis, gave up a run-scoring single to Bake McBride and fell behind 4-2 with Davis' clout to right centerfield.

Singles by Reggie Smith, Ted Simmons and Ron Fairly made it 5-2 and knocked out Tate in favor of Harry Parker, who walked Ken Reitz before getting the third out. Tate's record dropped to 4-9.

Brewers again defeat Red Sox, 6-2

NEW YORK (UPI) — Rudy May fired a three-hitter for his 10th win and Thurman Munson singled in the tie-breaking run in the sixth inning Wednesday night leading the New York Yankees to a 2-1 win over the Detroit Tigers.

May, 10-6, walked one and struck out seven in recording his eighth complete game. He retired 15 batters of the last 16 batters to face him after allowing a run in the fifth.

Mickey Lolich, 10-10, took the loss for Detroit. His fifth in a row. The veteran left-hander retired the first 13 batters to face him until he walked Lou Piniella in the fifth. Graig Nettles followed with a single for the Yankees' first hit, but Lolich retired the next two men to end the threat.

With Detroit leading 1-0, New York picked up two runs in the sixth. With one out, Bobby Bonds doubled and after Rick Bladt flied out, Roy White rifled a double inside third to tie the score. Munson's single sent White home, giving New York a 2-1 lead.

Detroit had scored in the fifth when Aurelio Rodriguez doubled, advanced on a fly ball and scored on Gene Michael's sacrifice fly.

Reds, 6-1

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Rookie Pat Darcy pitched his first complete game in the majors and ended the Cincinnati Reds' major league record string of 45 consecutive incomplete games by stopping the San Francisco Giants on eight hits while notching a 6-1 victory Wednesday night.

Darcy, 7-5, turned in the first complete game by a Cincinnati pitcher since Don Gullett beat the St. Louis Cardinals 3-1 June 11.

Johnny Bench and Tony Perez drove home five runs between them as the Reds tagged rookie lefty Pete Falcone with his seventh loss against seven victories. Bench and Perez singled home runs in the first inning as the Reds took a 2-0 lead. A walk to Joe Morgan, Bench's second double of the game and third hit of the game and a throwing error by catcher Dave Rader gave the Reds two more runs in the sixth.

Hale led off the eighth with a walk, was sacrificed to second and scored when Larvell Blanks threw away Steve Yeager's ground ball. One out later, Crawford was intentionally walked. Lopes hit an infield single and Winfield threw the ball away trying to get him at first. Crawford and Yeager scored and Lopes went to third. Buckner singled, driving in Lopes.

Brewers, 6-2
BOSTON (UPI) — Sixto Lezcano's three-run homer in the eighth inning powered the Milwaukee Brewers to their second straight win over the league-leading Boston Red Sox Wednesday, 6-2.

Lezcano, with the Brewers ahead 3-2 and runners on first and third, hit the ball over Fenway Park's left field wall with none out. George Scott led off the inning with a single and went to third on another single by Henry Aaron.

The Brewers, who moved within one game of the .500 mark, had taken the lead with two unearned runs in the seventh. Red Sox shortstop Bob Heise muffed a grounder by the Brewers' Kurt Bevacqua, allowing Mike Hegan to score from third with two out. Robin Yount, who had doubled Hegan to third, then scored on Don Money's single before reliever Jim Burton came in to end the rally.

The Red Sox started off well against Milwaukee's Jim Slaton, who evened his record at 10-10, with a first-inning run when Juan Beniquez tripled off the left field wall and scored on Denny Doyle's sacrifice fly.

Boston's other run came on Dwight Evans' solo homer in the seventh, his ninth of the year.

Dave Hill feels some pro golfers aren't appreciative

Dave Hill is 38. He plans to play four more years and call it quits. Then he wants to quit the pro golf tour and teach the game, putting something back into a sport which has helped him get a lot.

But he feels not too many other pros feel the same way he does. And he says it all comes down to a lack of appreciation on the part of the pro for what others do for him.

"I have no idea what others think about this, because I'm not in their heads," Hill said recently. "By watching some of their actions, I would say they don't appreciate it."

Hill is speaking of the courtesies given the pro golfer at a tournament site, the courtesy cars for transportation, the chance to play for hundreds of thousands of dollars each week, the lack of players volunteering to only take expenses in exhibitions for charitable causes.

Hill feels thankful he's had a chance to win a lot of money playing golf and now does things to put something back.

'They think I'm whippy'

But not too many others think that way.

"Maybe they would if they sat down and thought how fortunate we have been," Hill explained. "We're fortunate to have people like Horman (sponsors of a two-day event at Shawnee Sunday and Monday). They need us like they need a hole in the head. We played two days and you know, they're putting money in our pockets. But they did it for us and for themselves in a promotional way."

Charity the main concern
Playing for charitable causes, which for the most part are the basis of nearly every tour event, is Hill's area of concern.

"You could see what the golfers put back into the game if you could go into a golfer's life and find out what he did for nothing," Hill said. "In other words, what he did for charity. Instead of playing for charity, did he play a whole day or did he play five days a year and return the money back to that charity, such as we did for Sycist Fibrosis?"

Hill thinks it should be done. "Well, I think the pro should do four or five of those a year. Just take his expenses and turn what he was receiving back to charity. That's putting something back into the game."

Professional golfers don't play for fun. They play for money.

"Teeing it up in a golf tour-

nament because you're sponsoring it, he's not teeing it up because you are the sponsor but because it's for $250,000 and first prize is $50,000," Hill continued. "See, we're selfish individuals and this is something that I have tried to stop. I am selfish and I try not to be selfish. I've tried to do X-number of charitable things a year where I play and don't take any money."

Pros think he's whippy
Not everyone thinks like Hill. "No, they think I'm whippy," he smiled. "But I could care less what the people think of me. I just don't want to lose what my father and mother tried to teach me: appreciation."

We got around to this subject by discussing Hill's game, which he says may have benefited from a recent one-week break when he didn't touch a club. A questioner asked is that why Jack Nicklaus takes breaks and comes back strong?

"Jack Nicklaus basically doesn't care what happens to our tour and his tour," Hill stated. "He is not going to change his schedule for anybody. Which is his right. He is a great player, a great player and he plans to play where he can play well and where a golf course suits his game. He may alter his schedule once or twice a year, but is not going out of his way, ever, to support the sponsors of our tournament."

Begs to differ

Hill feels differently. "I think it's great that we have people who put up $200,000, even $100,000," he said. "A sponsor is basically an employer and they are doing us a favor. If they didn't, we never would have heard of Jack Nicklaus, would we? I'd be a truck driver or a machinist and Jack Nicklaus would be running his father-in-law's drug store."

A lot of people help run the weekly tour stops and put up to a year's work into it. For nothing.

"Say it was our tour," Hill ventured. "Say we went from city to city like a show. And we had to pay people to do things done now for nothing, you know, we wouldn't play for maybe $50,000. It'd cost half a million to pay these people. To do what they do for nothing.

'Sponsors do us favors'

the marshalls, courtesy car drivers."

Playing for Deputy Fund
This year, Hill and Lee Trevino will play a charitable exhibition in Memphis for the Deputy Relief Fund, and hopes to raise some big bucks.

"I hope we can raise $70-80,000 for them," he said. "I've won three times and Lee's won three, so why shouldn't we put something back? These deputies come out and give their time to walk with us and see that everything is all right. They see you get somewhere if you have to. This is one way we can help."

A good example of non-support is Quad Cities, where the Jaycees rescued the tournament this year and put up $75,000 in prize money.

"Well, that's $75,000 for 300 people, that they didn't have a chance to make that week if it hadn't been for the Jaycees," Hill said. "And they did a beautiful job."

The date was the same as the British Open.

"Next year, they'll probably play for $100,000 or $125,000. And yet most of our field is in England," he said. "To me, I couldn't see any great thrill in winning the British Open. None at all."

Dave Hill plays a good game of golf, he talks a good game of golf. The game's been good to him and now he wants to do something to show his appreciation. Dave Hill will be first in line to do just that.

Trabert Davis captain

NEW YORK (UPI)—Tony Trabert, appointed Wednesday as the new captain of the U.S. Davis Cup team, firmly believes America can regain the international tennis trophy and he would certainly like to have Jimmy Connors as a member of the team.

Trabert, named by U.S. Tennis Association president Stan Malless to succeed Dennis Ralston, said, while he was at a loss to explain Connors' attitude toward him, he was nevertheless sure that "it would not be difficult to clear the air" if he could meet face-to-face with Connors.

Trabert takes over the team direction after three disastrous years, in which America lost in the Challenge Round to Australia in 1973 and was eliminated in early rounds by Colombia in 1974 and by Mexico this year.

Much of the blame for these failures has been pinned on the absence of Connors, who declined to play for Ralston after failing to secure a playing spot against Jamaica in 1972.

Trabert, whose selection for the post was not finalized until late Tuesday, said he had met Connors only "maybe half a dozen times. I did make a comment on television that I thought him one of the finest players and at the same time remarked that Jimmy, himself, had been quoted as saying he liked being known as 'arrogant.'"

"I hope Connors plays," he said.

Secure Namath signs pact for $850,000 from Jets

HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. (UPI) — Joe Namath, his fortune well secured thanks to pantyhose, cologne and popcorn, "settled" for the richest contract in pro football Wednesday when he signed a two-year pact estimated at $850,000 with the New York Jets.

"Years ago, when I first signed a contract I was excited and pleased that I got more than anyone else," the 32-year-old quarterback said. "Now I can't think about money and what people get paid. I expected to be the highest paid player in football. It's nice, but I'm not going to dwell on it."

At the end of May, Namath rejected a $4 million offer to jump to the Chicago Winds of the World Football League. He was more able "to afford" the Jets' terms, on which he admitted he had to compromise, after signing a 20-year contract with a cosmetics company earlier this month. That deal will earn him $250,000 a year.

Namath also appears in commercials on television for such other diverse products as pantyhose, popcorn and men's clothing.

"Physically, I feel very good," a beaming, well tanned Namath said at a news conference at which he was flanked by team owner Phil Iselein, who commented, "I'm happy to have Joe back in the family where he belongs," and Jets' coach Charley Winner.

"I haven't had any injuries recently and I don't have to concentrate on getting myself well," Namath said. "I can't tell you if I feel better than I did five years ago, or eight years ago, I just know I feel good."

Namath said he had become concerned about his lagging contract talks and until two nights ago still had doubts that he would be returning for an 11th year in New York.

"I was beginning to get edgy and I wanted to play football," he said. "There was just so much I could do in Tusculouza (Ala.). I wanted to be here and I wanted to get started."

"Mr. Iselein knew that and I think he took advantage of it in the negotiations."

So anxious was Namath to get started, even on a day when the temperature approached 90 degrees, that he underwent his physical just after meeting with the media and then joined his teammates for an afternoon workout on the Hofstra University practice field.

Namath is expected to travel with the Jets to Pleasantville, N.Y., today for a scrimmage with the New York Giants.

Irwin sets sights on Westchester

HARRISON, N.Y. (UPI) — While some of the richer folks take the week off, Hale Irwin hopes to take a big step toward the year's moneywinning title in the Westchester Golf Classic that begins today.

"It's still up for grabs and it's important to me," Irwin says. "I'd be wrong if I said it wasn't important."

Johnny Miller notwithstanding, Irwin has been the prime challenger to Jack Nicklaus' dominance of the game since early this year, only he doesn't go around making a big thing of it.

But Irwin has won twice, finished in the top 10 in 11 of the 18 tournaments he has entered and climbed to No. 3—behind Nicklaus and Miller—in the money standings.

Miller, the defending champion, is here this week, too, but four of the game's eight million dollar winners—Nicklaus, Arnold Palmer, Lee Trevino and Billy Casper—are not playing, although the $250,000 purse (the winner gets $50,000) is the year's second biggest.

"In my world, that's a lot of money," Irwin says.

Nicklaus is skipping Westchester for the first time in the tournament's nine-year run because he wants to prepare for the PGA Championship next week at Akron, Ohio, but also because his contract with Eastern Airlines, Westchester's main sponsor, has expired. Palmer, likewise missing this one for the first time, says he's "totally exhausted."

Trevino hasn't played here since a dispute over his caddy in 1972. And Casper hasn't come around since 1970, complaining the local people were rude to him and his family.

Others who are here include Gary Player, Tom Weiskopf, close at Westchester the last two years and a winner last week in the Canadian Open, British Open champion Tom Watson and U.S. Open champ Lou Graham.

Arab art buying hasn't created expected boom

LONDON—A portrait of the 15 sons and grandsons of Fath 'Ali Shah could have been bought in 1970 for a few thousand dollars. This year the picture fetched $440,000 at a London auction, because Fath 'Ali Shah ruled Persia in the early 19th century, and his kingdom has become the stupendously wealthy Iran.

On July 7, a portrait of the monarch himself, with a full black beard, bejeweled robes and elaborate crown, was purchased at Sotheby's by a private Iranian collector who paid $220,000 for it. The attention given these events by dealers reflected the gradual involvement of the oil-rich Middle East in Western fine art markets.

Many 19th century Persian paintings have been bought by Iranian Empress Farah and other members of the Shah's family for the Royal Palace in Tehran. But the buying has been cautious and selective. The idea that wealthy Arabs and Iranians would dominate salesrooms, pushing up all art prices that had been badly hit by a recession in 1974, has proved an illusion.

Both Sotheby's and Christie's, the largest fine art auctioneers in the world, have strenuously courted Middle Eastern buyers in the past year. Executives are now appointed to serve the region and Sotheby's has established an office in Tehran which accepts bids for sales in London, New York and Los Angeles.

Judging by the number of Middle Eastern dealers who have set up offices in London there is a great potential in selling art works to the area, but the market is limited. Unlike the Japanese, who a few years ago triggered a boom in Impressionist prices as an inflation hedge, Middle Eastern buyers concentrate on items they like, especially objects linked to their homelands. They are not speculative investors.

To a great extent religion controls their buying. The strict Saudi Arabians and the Gulf emirs adhere to the Koran's injunctions against human portraiture, and their acquisitions are confined to rugs and manuscripts. A Persian manuscript which brought $2,900 at Sotheby's in 1949 sold in the same saleroom last April for $92,400.

It is the Iranians and the Lebanese who have set the pace: Iran, in particular, has a long tradition of painting.

The Iranians have concentrated on 19th Century works of art, especially the paintings of the Qajar dynasty. But they are also active purchasers of Victorian silver and furniture, buying heavy, elaborate items which are the height of fashion now with European buyers. They also seem to prefer 19th century copies of classical French furniture instead of the real thing, which carry $4,000 rather than $40,000 price tags.

There are some important Iranian collectors with refined tastes. At the first Sotheby sale in Monte Carlo in May, Habib Sabet paid more than $325,000 for a Renaissance bronze horse built in the late 16th century in Florence.

That was the highest price in a sale of objects from the homes of Baron Guy de Rothschild and Baron de Rede; it was around four times the pre-sale estimate.

As Middle Eastern buyers get better acquainted with Western art works, prices seem bound to rise higher, in line with the higher quality of the purchases.

Among the sought after artists are Delacroix, Utrillo, Vlaminck and Braque. Such works appear destined for rich Middle Eastern homes. Old Masters seem not to fit the Arab taste.

The scale of purchases intensified in 1975. In March a Beirut dealer named Atallah gave $38,500 for a Charles II toilet service at Christie's. Another Lebanese dealer paid $9,000 in February for a Swiss gold watch. There have also been first purchases of Chinese ceramics.

Guest robbed at area resort

SWIFTWATER — A Union, N.J. man was robbed of $600 while staying at Mt. Airy Lodge Sunday, according to state police at Swiftwater. Police said Kazys Trečiokas, 59, was in his room about 7 p.m. Sunday when he discovered his wallet had been stolen.

In the brown wallet was $500 in American Express traveler's checks and $100 cash. Police said the wallet has not been recovered.

Gallup poll

Fear of crime grows

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is part two of a three-part series on crime in America.

By GEORGE GALLUP

PRINCETON, N.J. — President Ford's statement that crime is "making us fearful of strangers and afraid to go out at night" is supported by alarming findings from the latest nationwide Gallup Poll.

Nearly half of Americans (a record 45 per cent) are afraid to walk in their neighborhoods at night. In the nation's largest cities (500,000 and over) the figure reaches well over half (56 per cent). And among women in these urban areas, a startling 77 per cent are fearful of venturing out after dark.

In addition, many do not feel safe and secure even within the confines of their own homes. As many as one person in five (a record 19 per cent) nationwide admits to being fearful of household intruders.

Important differences emerge on the basis of racial background and by income level. Although non-whites and persons in lower income brackets have been particularly hard hit by the economy, these groups name crime as a bigger problem in their cities and communities than either unemployment or high prices. In addition, a considerably larger proportion of non-whites than whites express fear about walking in their neighborhoods after dark. The proportion of non-whites who say they do not feel safe in their homes at night is twice that of whites.

As reported in part one of the current three-part series, crime is the top concern of residents of cities of all sizes, and is named ahead of even pressing economic problems. A generation ago, crime was far down the list of the worries of city inhabitants.

The percentage saying they are fearful of walking in their neighborhoods at night has climbed from 31 per cent in 1968 to 42 per cent in a late 1972 survey to 45 per cent today. The percentage who say they are fearful in their homes was 17 per cent in 1972 (when the measurement was started) and is 19 per cent today.

While the figures on fear of crime have changed little since 1972 for the nation as a whole, dramatic changes are found in terms of the views of specific population groups. Among non-whites, for example, the percentage fearful of walking in their neighborhoods has increased from about one person in two to three persons in five. Some evidence of an uptrend is also found in terms of fear within the home.

The trend on the growing fear of crime is consistent with other findings from the current survey which shows about half of Americans (49 per cent in the sample) holding the belief that the crime situation has worsened in their communities over the last 12 months. Only one person in eight (12 per cent) says "less," while 29 per cent say there has been little change.

General agreement is found among the various population groups that the crime situation has worsened over the last year.

Following are the two questions asked to measure fear of crime, the results and findings from earlier surveys:

"Is there any area right around here — that is, within a mile — where you would be afraid to walk alone at night?"

Most fearful of their neighborhood after dark are women, non-whites and persons living in the nation's largest cities, as seen in the following table:

PER CENT FEARFUL OF WALKING IN NEIGHBORHOOD AT NIGHT
	1968	1972	1975
NATIONAL	31	42	45
Men	16	22	26
Women	44	60	63

Midwest	26	34	39
South	34	52	48
West	32	41	49

"How about at home at night — do you feel safe and secure, or not?"

The results again show women, non-whites and persons in the largest cities to be the most fearful, as seen below:

PER CENT SAYING FEARFUL IN HOME AT NIGHT
	1972	1975
NATIONAL	17	19
Men	12	13
Women	20	25

Under 2,500	16	17
East	14	20
Midwest	16	18
South	20	21
West	16	16

The results reported today are based on in-person interviews with 1,558 adults, 18 and older, in more than 300 scientifically selected localities across the nation during the period June 27-30.

Tax bill corrected for about five dollars

STROUDSBURG — A tax refund of $5.20 to the Brainard Presbyterian Center was approved Monday by the Monroe County Commissioners.

According to William H. Fetherman, chief assessor of Monroe County. The owners paid $2,228 in real estate taxes in 1972.

The center filed a formal appeal with the Board of Assessment Appeals asserting it was a non-profit organization. Fetherman said that statement was documented and the taxes were adjusted to cover only that portion of the land which was not used for non-profit purposes — a caretakers house.

Fetherman said the partial exemption was retroactive to the time the appeal was filed.

The commissioners also made corrections to the tax duplicates for 54 house trailers which have been removed from the county.

The trailers were valued at a total of $46,000.

Park parade

EAST STROUDSBURG — A doll parade will be held Wednesday at 1 p.m. at Dansbury Park in East Stroudsburg. Categories include, biggest, smallest, best dressed and most unusual doll. Stuffed dolls and puppets made in arts and crafts are also eligible. Prizes will be awarded.
